Town Again Refuses To Accept New Well

Town Engineer Recommends Against Acceptance Of Well

The town declined to accept the Srigley St. well at a council meeting Monday evening.

The International Water Supply Co. will be obligated to service the well for a year from the time of acceptance.

J. B. McNamama, representing the company, would not consider a proposal to enter into a new agreement committing Newmarket to acceptance of the well at the end of a year if it behaves well in the meantime.

"While you are not obligated to accept it at its present quantity, it is a usable supply," said Mr. McNamama.

"We would still be under obligation to maintain it," he said.

"Do you think that well will supply us permanently?" asked Mayor Dr. S. J. Boyd.

"Yes," said Mr. McNamama. "We closed off the upper part of the well that was giving us trouble, both with silt and on account of chemical quality. The lower strata of water seems to be the same quality as the rest of the town water, except that it has more iron."

"We are worried because it is our baby when we accept it," said Reeve Dr. L. W. Dales.

"No, it is not your baby for a year," said Mr. McNamama.

"If you are confident that it will give us no trouble, why not give us a little better guarantee, more than a year," said Dr. Dales. "If you would do that, I think we might get this matter settled."

"That question comes up all the time," was the reply. "A further guarantee would have to be bonded, and would show on our books as a liability."

"Would you consider it advisable to use sodium silicate to overcome the odor from the water?" asked Deputy-Reeve Joseph Vale.

"Not unless you have complaints," said Mr. McNamama.

"The water has been worse the last few days," said Mr. Vale.

"I am afraid we are going to have trouble with that well," said Dr. Dales. "I don't believe a bond is necessary. Just give us your guarantee for the extra year."

"I couldn't persuade my associates to give more than a year's guarantee," was the reply.

"If trouble develops in seven months, you look after it," said N. L. Mathews, K. C., clerk and solicitor. "If trouble develops six months later than that, we have to look after it."

With the consent of the mayor, Mr. Mathews proposed that the town and the company should enter into a supplemental agreement committing the town to take over the well at the end of a year if no major adjustments were necessary in that time and the water supply is maintained.

"The trouble with that is it involves a two-year guarantee," said Mr. McNamama. "We have supplied the water for three years. We didn't expect to maintain the well so long."

"Well, we are not going to argue about it," said Dr. Dales. "You ran into difficulty. If you had been lucky you would have made a lot of money. You have lost and we are trying to share that loss. We are asking a small thing."

"We bought a permanent water supply," said Dr. Boyd. "We want to be sure of its permanence. We want a five-year guarantee."

"That's out of the question," said Mr. McNamama.

"How many of the council are in favor of Mr. Mathews' suggestion?" asked the mayor.

"I am concerned about the maintenance," said Councillor Wm. Dixon.

"I am concerned about the quality of the water," said Councillor Arthur Evans.

W. B. Redfern, town engineer, recommended that the council wait until the summer before committing itself further.

"The water needs to be better than it is now," said Mr. Redfern.

"We must take the engineer's recommendation," said Dr. Boyd. "How many are in favor of waiting till summer?"

The council voted approval and the mayor declared: "That settles it."

CONSERVATIVE EUCHRE

OLD SPANISH CUSTOM IRKS TOWN'S REEVE

When the town council "goes into committee of the whole," as it does whenever it wants to pay an account or accounts, two members of the council put their names on a resolution form and one reads the resolution.

"Is that necessary?" asked Reeve Dr. L. W. Dales on Monday evening.

"Yes," said N. L. Mathews, K. C., clerk and solicitor.

"An old Spanish custom," said a fellow lawyer, Deputy-Reeve Joseph Vale.

PER DIEM COST IS ONLY $2.40

Service was rendered to 995 patients during the year ending Sept. 30, 1937, according to the report of York County Hospital presented to county council this week.

The report, asking for $2,000, the annual grant, was signed by George D. Wark, president, P. W. Pearson, vice-president, and J. J. McCaffrey, secretary-treasurer.

The total cost per patient per day was $2.40.

The financial statement showed total revenues of $30,633, and an operating loss of $1,633 after allowing $2,973 for depreciation of building, plant and equipment.

AURORA CONGRATULATED ON 50TH BIRTHDAY

On the motion of Reeve Dr. L. W. Dales and Councillor A. D. Evans, the council passed a resolution of congratulation to the sister town of Aurora on its 50th anniversary as a town, at a meeting Monday evening. The resolution conveyed "hearty greetings and best wishes on the occasion of their jubilee of incorporation this year."

"That's a very happy thought on your part, Dr. Dales," Mayor Dr. S. J. Boyd said.

Newmarket Backs Aurora Drive On Yonge Problem

Loss Of Life And Traffic Congestion To Be Discussed Tuesday

The town council asked, on the motion of Reeve Dr. L. W. Dales and Councillor Arthur D. Evans, that "the department of highways consider immediately the widening of Yonge St. below Richmond Hill to Steele's Corners in the interests of safe driving and the relief of traffic congestion on this crowded highway route," at a meeting Monday evening.

A letter from the Aurora board of trade asked that Newmarket co-operate with other municipalities "to secure more safety and better travel facilities on the Yonge St. highway."

The letter, signed by J. M. Walton, said in part: "In view of the larger, heavier and faster freight and passenger transports and the increased number of faster running autos, all using the same pavement, the congestion of traffic, and dangers incidental thereto, is yearly increasing.

"The loss of life and property by traffic accidents on this dangerous part of Yonge St. has become so serious that it affects the whole district served," the letter also said.

The letter recommended the removal of trolley tracks or the widening of Yonge St., construction of subways at Thornhill and Langstaff and sidewalks for pedestrians.

It also contained an invitation to attend a meeting in Aurora on Tuesday, Jan. 25, to discuss the subject.

SIR WILLIAM IS 95

Congratulations were extended to Sir Wm. Mulock on the attainment of his 95th birthday on Wednesday in a resolution brought in by Deputy-Reeve Joseph Vale and passed unanimously by the town council on Monday evening.

MAKE PLANS FOR NEW CURRICULUM

The high school board met on Jan. 11 to conclude the business for 1937.

The board followed the practice of joining the Ontario School Trustees and Ratepayers Association.

The date for the first meeting of the new board was set for Tuesday, Feb. 1, at 4 p.m.

Reporting for the management committee, W. J. Patterson recommended that the insurance committee, if it sees fit, should take out theft insurance covering the contents of the school.

It was stated that two typewriters, taken from the school last year, had not been recovered.

On motion of P. W. Pearson and Rev. Dr. W. D. Muckle, the management committee was authorized to wax two class-room floors at the convenience of the school.

Improvements to the boiler of the furnace, for testing it, recommended by an insurance inspector, will be made, it was decided.

Twelve new padlocks for lockers will be purchased.

The board decided to purchase 12 new typewriters at $100 each and to turn in ten old ones at an allowance of $35 each; and also to replace five old machines a year until all have been replaced.

The management committee was empowered to have representatives of the department of education visit the school to give instructions or advice on alterations to the class-rooms to adapt the building to the new courses.

Chairman George D. Wark presided.

LOCAL "LADY" HAS DOMINION HIGH FOR 1937

House Of Refuge Cow Has Milk Production Record For Canada

Statistics released by the federal department of agriculture, appear to indicate that "Princess Patricia Beauty," junior 4-year-old Holstein Friesian owned and developed by York County House of Refuge, Newmarket, gave more milk than any other cow of her age in Canada for 1937 (for strictly twice per day milking) and ranks second highest for the all-time dominion record.

During the test period of 365 days, Princess Patricia, classed as junior 4-year-old gave 21,541 lbs. of milk. The all-time Dominion record, according to information received, is held by Banostine Alcartra Norine, owned by E. L. Sweet, Belmont, Ontario, with a record of 22,619 lbs. milk.

A few years ago, in order to provide sufficient pure milk and cream for the requirement of approximately 100 inmates of the House of Refuge, the home commissioners secured a few head of accredited and federally bloodtested two-year-olds and yearlings, as the nucleus of a small pure bred dairy herd, which have since developed very satisfactorily. The cow making this great record is one of the young heifers purchased at that time.

Another animal showing splendid form is Lonelm Rag Apple Doris, a two-year-old heifer who during her present lactation has three butter-fat tests recording 3.9 per cent, 4.5 per cent, and 5.8 per cent. These are splendid percentages, having regard for the fact that federal authorities use an average butter fat base for the breed of 3.4 per cent.

Abbekerk Sylvia Girl, a junior 3-year-old, finished some few months ago a 305-day R.O.P. record of 618 lbs. butter, and stood third in her class. As a senior three-year-old she has started another lactation, averaging for the first three months to date, 2,100 lbs. of milk per month.

Another cow in this herd that will be heard from is Marie Fayne Colantha, a 4-year-old with the same blood lines as Princess Patricia. During the past 68 days of this test she has averaged upwards of 80 lbs. of milk per day.

Congratulations are due to Major D. E. Sprague, superintendent, and the commissioners, W. H. Pugsley, reeve of Sutton, and J. P. Jefferson, reeve of King, for the splendid progress being made in this small but efficient county institution for the aged. It is a matter of justifiable pride to every resident in the county that this signal honor should come to the county of York.

Eliza Jane Willson, widow of the late David L. Willson, a former resident of Newmarket, died last Thursday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Gerald Wade, Winnipeg. She was in her 89th year.

Mrs. Willson was born in Sharon. Her husband died 50 years ago. Mrs. Willson had lived in Winnipeg for the last 30 years.

Surviving besides Mrs. Wade is one son, H. L. Willson. Funeral services were held on Saturday afternoon, with burial at Elmwood, Man.

Markies Tie Sutton In Fast Overtime Game

Redmen Redeem Themselves In Smart Exhibition Of Hockey

BY RALPH M. ADAMS

With a game each and a tie, Newmarket and Sutton go into the fourth game of their six-game intermediate O.H.A. series at the local arena tonight.

One of the largest hockey crowds in years is expected.

Displaying a genuine fighting spirit that enabled them to come from behind twice, Randall's Redmen held the Sutton aggregation to a three-three tie on Monday night right in their own backyard. A startling reversal of form, from the lackdaisical display of last Thursday, changed the fans' opinion of the local squad early in the fracas. On the play both teams were fairly even, although the Reds should have cashed in on one or two chances that they messed up.

This observer for one was certainly surprised at the showing of the "N" team after the sorry showing of last week. One factor that pleased the Newmarket supporters was the fighting spirit of the team. They played real heads-up hockey for the entire 70 minutes.

Reds Open Scoring

As usual Sutton carried the play from the opening gong but the Reds came right back, Hunt and Ogilvie both coming close when they fired successive shots out of a scramble. Play speeded up, the Reds sticking with the stovies on every play. They certainly had the "umph" to keep up the pace. Smith sprawled to save from Hunt on a Hunt-Shepstone rush.

Burkholder slashed and took a rest, and Newmarket put on the pressure. McCrea and Roberts forced Smith to pull two sparkling saves in a row. Believe me Hedges sure called the play plenty close on the blue line while Sutton was short-handed. Schmidt nearly scored when he stole the puck from Roberts but Peters kicked it out.

The Reds grabbed themselves a headache when Shepstone and Peat got the gate in succession and Sutton was every man up. After Shepstone returned, Ogilvie broke away, rounded Shupe and beat Smith with a high shot. Less than a minute later, the Reds still a man short, MacDonald picked up Milroy's rebound to tie the score. Both teams passed up chances before the end of the period. Just as the gong sounded Peat was given a rest for apparently boarding Milroy, and I do mean APPARENTLY.

Both Add One

Milroy slashed at Ogilvie on the first play and got the finger. Mac-

CONSERVATIVES MEET

It is requested that all lady Conservatives meet at the home of Miss N. Forsythe, Timothy St., Friday evening, Jan. 2, at 8 p.m. to make final arrangements for the euchre to be held in the Bugle Band hall, Wednesday evening, Jan. 26 next.

French Musical Celebrity Will Give Recital Here

Mlle. Renee Nizan Of Paris, Youthful Organist, Is On World Tour

A remarkable young French organist, Mlle. Renée Nizan of Paris, will give an organ recital in St. John's Catholic church, Newmarket, next Sunday afternoon, Jan. 23, at 3 o'clock.

Mlle. Nizan's younger brother, also an organist, is accompanying his vivacious, fair-haired sister. They are real pals together. Renée's father, Monsieur Henri Nizan, is organist and choirmaster at Notre Dame de Boulogne, Paris, France.

Mlle. Nizan began studies with her father, continuing later with Dallier and the famous Louis Vierne. She made her debut in Paris at the age of 14 and the following year played on the famous organ of the Trocadero. She is now on her third tour of the United States and Canada where she has played on the largest organs in the principal cities.

Continuing this tour across the continent, she and her brother will sail for New Zealand late in the spring. The beautiful young Renée had given 200 recitals before she was 18 years old. In 1932 she was selected by the Guild of Musicians of the United States to be guest organist at their annual convention at Kansas City.

Rev. Dr. Muckle, pastor of St. John's church, extends a cordial invitation to all lovers of music, whether Catholic or non-Catholic, to come and enjoy the real treat in store for those who are present next Sunday.

Mlle. Nizan and her family are personal friends of Rev. Dr. Muckle and it is out of personal regard for him that Renée comes to Newmarket. On Jan. 20 she gives an organ recital in Notre Dame Cathedral, Montreal, and on Saturday she is engaged for a recital at the Eaton Auditorium, Toronto.

Mlle. Nizan will play selections by Bach, Couperin, Vierne, Widor, Dallier, Cesar Franck, and others.

Council Committee Will Check All Building Permits

Joseph Brammar Reports Large Number Of Permits Issued

Twenty-five building permits involving a total expenditure of $40,460 were issued during 1937, Joseph Brammar, building inspector, reported to the town council on Monday evening.

"In the future you will be responsible as building inspector to the building and property committee," Councillor A. V. Higginson informed Mr. Brammar. "All permits will be scrutinized carefully."

"That will be a great help to me," said Mr. Brammar.

"There should be two other permits," Mr. Brammar also said. "Two buildings were put up contrary to law. One party didn't know a permit was necessary. The permits will be issued when things are made right."

DR. W. S. ALEXANDER RETURNS TO PULPIT

Dr. Warner S. Alexander, pastor of the Christian-Congregational church will be back in the pulpit on Sunday. Dr. Alexander has been absent for almost six months, the result of a broken neck sustained in a motor accident last summer.

Rev. W. Magwood of Toronto occupied the pulpit during that time. Dr. Alexander has had his head and neck in a cast for five months, but it has now been removed and he is rapidly regaining his normal health.

Sutton Walks Away With Shut-Out Against Reds

Redmen's Luck Is Out When Northerners Invade Newmarket

The Redmen were outplayed in the local arena before one of the best crowds in years last Thursday night. The Suttonites put up a great show and deserved their win, which tied up the series at one-all.

Peters made a real fight and did his share to hold the Sutton boys to a five to nil score. The local boys weren't up to the class they showed in the opening game which they captured at Sutton, but offered no alibis.

Sutton Takes Command

From the opening the stove boys jumped into the driver's seat and stayed there. Twice in the first minute Carpentier and MacDonald tested Peters but he kicked the rubber out both times. Peat took a little steam out of Milroy when he bounced the mid-ice man twice in a row. Townsley was cracked in the eye by a flying puck and retired for repairs.

Peat and Roberts put on a sally that ended in a scramble. Hunt's line came out and messed the Sutton attackers behind their own blue line time and again. Ogilvie and Bernard both had good opportunities but just couldn't click.

Sutton drew their first taste of blood with three-quarters of the canto away; MacDonald rifling a whizzer past a baffled Peters. The same winger came right back but this time "Bobbie" beat him. Carpentier got the cooler for cross-checking and the locals made an attempt at a ganging play, although the first line with Townsley, who had returned, did get in as far as the crease once. Sutton was easily the master of the situation in this initial period and never was seriously threatened.

Newmarket forced the pastime in the first two minutes but petered out badly. Then came a slight epidemic of penalties. Carpentier slashed Ogilvie, and took a rest. Shupe hooked

Main St. "Merk" Hits 28 Below In Wee Sma' Hours Of Tuesday

Nemarket has experienced the coldest snap of the winter this week. Early Saturday morning the temperature fell to 12 degrees below zero, the coldest yet this winter. Then early Tuesday morning, thermometers dropped down and down.

"It was 28 below, according to a reliable thermometer on Main St. at about 2 o'clock," Constable James Sloss who was on night duty told The Era. The thermometer at the waterworks registered 30 below. It was reported to be 34 below at Connaught Gardens at that hour. As late as 8.30 on Tuesday morning it was 22 below.

DRAMA TAUGHT BY TORONTO EXPERT

Under the auspices of the Community Welfare Council, the York county department of agriculture, and Pickering College community extension service, dramatic institutes are being sponsored at Newmarket, Nobleton and Unionville, each for two evenings.

The instructor at these meetings is James Dean of Central Technical School, Toronto. Meetings are held in St. Paul's parish hall at 8 p.m.

Mr. Dean is a very interesting speaker and his first lecture was very instructive and helpful to all interested in producing plays.

"When choosing a play," explained Mr. Dean, "it is necessary to consider the audience, the producing organization, and the play itself. Also you must consider the size of the cast and the experience of the actors who will participate.

"No group should attempt to produce an unpleasant play, one that deals with sex, a problem play, one with abnormal psychology, or one requiring angels or ghosts. Regarding the royalty, $5 is plenty for an amateur group to pay.

"To judge a play after reading it, consider: 1. Has it grip? 2. Is there action so play will move? 3. Is the dialogue good? 4. Are the situations good? 5. Look for twist. 6. Plot must be possible. 7. There must be suspense or sustained interest."

At the next meeting the audience will read a play and then Mr. Dean will conduct a discussion on it.

MISS LETTIE TOOLE IS WIDELY MOURNED

Born at Pine Orchard, the daughter of Silas and Harriett Penrose Toole, Florence Loretta ("Lettie") Toole died at her home on Prospect St. last Friday afternoon.

Rev. T. W. Neal, a former pastor, assisted by Rev. E. J. Thompson of Aurora, conducted the funeral service on Monday. Interment took place in the family plot at Pine Orchard cemetery.

Pall bearers were Fred Chantler, Stanley Janes, C. F. Willis, W. H. Eves, W. J. Patterson and L. P. Cane.

She attended school at Pine Orchard and Newmarket and left the home farm 24 years ago to reside in Newmarket.

Although not in perfect health for a little over a year, Miss Toole was ill only a week. She is greatly missed by many friends.

A brother, C. A. Toole, Pine Orchard, and two sisters, Mrs. Mary E. Bogart and Lillian Toole, both of Newmarket, survive.

School Trustee Holds Seat, Janitor's Cheque Explained

A motion to unseat Angus Cameron as a trustee for school section 4, North Gwillimbury, before County Judge Parker last week proved unsuccessful.

Harold A. Smith, trustee, and George Fairbarn, a former trustee, contended that Mr. Cameron was disqualified as he had received a cheque for $8 as caretaker for the school while he was a member of the board.

Mr. Cameron said that he had not performed the duties as caretaker, and that the cheque had been made out to him as a matter of convenience, and that he had turned it over to a girl who had acted as caretaker.

Judge Parker accepted this explanation. N. L. Mathews, K. C., represented Mr. Smith and Mr. Fairbarn and Joseph Vale acted for Mr. Cameron.

AWAY IN GERMANY

The village of Fergus, distinguished as the former home of the late Dr. Groves, Ontario's Lister, and as the home of the News-Record, a weekly newspaper with a province-wide reputation, has a completely new village council. Not a member of the 1938 council was a member of the council in the last four years, and the entire 1937 council was defeated. The Fergus News-Record and a majority of citizens joined together to turn out a council which, according to the News-Record, wasn't as good as it should have been. Among the many issues were recently installed and expensive traffic lights. It seems that more lights were to follow and that Mr. Smith, the deputy-minister of highways, had given his approval to the additional installation just before the election. That helped to swell the tide, already flowing pretty strong, which, like a Grand river flood, carried the old council out by a two to one vote. Anyway, the editor of the News-Record was at Queen's Park the other day and thought he would thank Mr. Smith for his timely help. But Mr. Smith wasn't there, and the editor reports that "he was away in Germany studying new road developments."

Giving Away State Secrets

Now that strikes us as a very newsy piece of news, something we hadn't seen in the daily press. Ontario's deputy-minister of highways goes to Germany to study new road developments. One of the three most unpopular nations of the world at the moment, from the point of view of democratic countries, Germany is still able to produce new ideas on the subject of road-building. One of the greatest road-builders of all time, Rome, was also a great war-maker, but if Germany's new highway ideas are really to be used for war purposes, isn't she foolish to entertain men like Mr. Smith? She is foolish, because it is well-known in this country and the United States, by those who control the national purse-strings, that Germany and Italy and Japan are even now planning wars upon this continent. Yet according to the Fergus News-Record some of the ideas for the marvellous new middle highway between Toronto and Hamilton came from Germany, and now Mr. Smith has gone back for more. This Mr. Hitler is a very foolish man.

An Opened Letter

However, we wouldn't care to argue that Mr. Hitler may not cause trouble, serious trouble into which Canadians and Americans may be drawn, in Europe. Mr. A. B. Hodgetts of Pickering College recently told the local Lions club of his experiences in Germany at the time of the Olympic games. Mr. Hodgetts was employed by a commercial organization to take charge of a group of Canadian boys who were to be guests of the German government. On arrival in a German youth camp at the scene of the games, they found that other countries were represented by soldierly groups who marched and saluted and wore uniforms. They also found that the grub was terrific. Mr. Hodgetts immediately wrote a letter of complaint to his employers. The letter was opened before it left Germany and he was put on the carpet.

Canadians Were Bad Example

Mr. Hodgetts explained that his group of boys had paid for the privilege of coming to Germany and that they did not expect to be subjected to military discipline and subsistence rations. "Oh, you're tourists," the Germans politely exclaimed. So they agreed that the Canadians should not be treated so harshly. Mr. Hodgetts and his boys started to appear for the early morning parade and salute to the Olympic flag in their pyjamas, then returning to their beds. Other national groups began to follow them, with the eventual result that the Canadians destroyed all the discipline and formality of that German youth camp.

Forced Into War

But Mr. Hodgetts told of the extreme discipline to which the youth of Germany are being subjected, told of the killing of young German heads with nationalistic ideas and of obvious preparation for war. He argued that, because the German people are making such a sacrifice to train themselves and to pay for armaments, eventually a demand will arise: What is it all for? and the German dictatorship will be forced into war of some kind. Mr. Hodgetts forecast that Germany would follow Italy and make war over a claim for colonies. If you were to ask Mr. Hodgetts in what direction he thinks Germany will look for colonies, we doubt that he would name the North American continent. After all, if Britain couldn't keep the United States and Canada in a colonial condition, would Germany have a much better chance? No, we don't think that Mr. Hitler has his eyes on Fergus or Newmarket or that he cares about how many middle roads we build.

HIGH SCHOOL COSTS

It seems that, in spite of gloomy forebodings, the high school, under the new high school costs system, is not going to make extra heavy demands on the town this year. On the contrary, as the result of an accumulated surplus and a larger grant from the province, it is said that the board will ask for less than usual. Naturally, there is some speculation as to whether this will reduce the town tax rate or whether the town will use the money in other ways. There are so many demands made on the council for money to be spent in various ways that the council will have no difficulty in using the money.

Suggestions

For several years past the road and bridge committee (incidentally, Aurora has changed the name of its corresponding committee this year to "streets committee") has contended that it needed more money to maintain streets and sidewalks in proper condition. A prominent former member of the council, J. O. Little, contends that the citizens would approve of a mill on the tax rate to help such organizations as the Citizens' Band, the Bugle Band and the Sportsmen's Association (fairgrounds improvement). W. W. Osborne, chairman of the town's water and light committee, will be asking the council for new lights and standards for the west side of Main St., preferably supplied by underground wires. There has been talk for the past few years of widening Main St., by removing all poles and cutting down the sidewalks.

Economy

There is no lack of suggestions. Mayor Dr. S. J. Boyd can be depended on to insist on economy and wise spending, and the council will be found to be in agreement with him.

A SCHOOL BOARD SCOLDED

An Uxbridge mother has been pulling the board of education of that town over red hot coals. In a scorching speech, reported to the extent of three columns in the town paper, the Times-Journal, Mrs. Blackburn denounced the school board for forcing out R. G. Colgrove, who was principal last year. Mrs. Blackburn spoke at the nomination meeting. The board, she said, had driven away the best principal the school had had in seven years, a man who would, she prophesied, become one of the best known educationalists in Canada. She said that the new curriculum held great possibilities but that the department of education had warned the public that, mishandled, it could give great disappointments. Unless Uxbridge looked out, the high school would lose pupils to Newmarket high school at a cost of $78 each to the county, she declared.

UNCLE SAM, TENANT

Our suggestion two weeks ago that it was peculiar for a Canadian municipality to be landlord to Uncle Sam in his own frontyard has been taken up by the Canadian Statesman, and we are able to give you the interesting story.

"The Newmarket Era commented last week on the fact that Bowmanville was a landlord to the United States Government, and expressed some surprise at this fact. For the benefit of Editor Hebb, and those of our own readers who do not know the story behind the McGill building, here it is very briefly.

"James McGill, a native of Bowmanville, was a successful architect living in Washington. He always maintained an interest in his old home town, even to the extent of drawing plans for the present town hall—we understand without charge. On his death he left the McGill building in Washington to the town of Bowmanville, after the death of his wife. The building is valued at approximately $150,000. Mrs. McGill died shortly after Mr. McGill, and Bowmanville should have become the owners of the building. However, McGill relatives stepped in and claimed a portion of the estate, and a costly legal war ensued, which lasted more than 20 years. The relatives were finally satisfied when an agreement was drawn allowing them 41 per cent of the estate and the town 59 per cent.

"Then action was started on the grounds that no alien could hold property in the District of Columbia, and this litigation lasted until 1929 when the United States supreme court handed down a ruling, which permitted Bowmanville to retain its interest in the building. Since that time thousands of dollars have been placed in the Bowmanville treasury—the income from the building. More than once this money kept the tax rate down to a reasonable level, and it also provided the money which the town had to pay toward paving Concession St. to the Boys' Training School. From the estate also came the funds that provided for the erection of the McGill Memorial Gates at Bowmanville Cemetery. That very briefly is the story of the McGill building. The town hopes to sell the building as soon as possible and use the proceeds as a sinking fund for the retirement of debentures. If the town can secure $100,000 for the building, which is about all that can be expected in these days of depressed real estate prices, it will have coming to it approximately $59,000 from which some legal fees will have to be deducted."

GAS TAX TO WIDEN MAIN ST.

There were three candidates for mayor in the recent election in Huntsville. There was a large vote for this office and also for the council. An interesting thing is that all the candidates for council got together and pooled their transportation facilities. When you took a ride to the polling-booth, you weren't under any obligation to anybody except to all the candidates and of course you couldn't vote for them all.

New Mayor Speaking

As the successful candidate for the mayor's office was the editor of the Huntsville Forester, we may well listen to what the Forester says editorially on matters municipal. Commenting on the contention of Mayor Ralph Day of Toronto that municipalities should have a greater share of motor revenue, the Forester says:

"There is much to be said for the mayor's contention. Most municipalities have been compelled to spend many thousands of dollars in recent years to render more safe their streets for the travelling motorist. Last year Huntsville issued debentures for another $15,000 to widen Main St., because of its former inadequacy to meet the needs of motor traffic. This experience has been duplicated by many municipalities throughout Ontario, for similar reasons.

"The motorist is called upon to contribute much more than is being spent by the Ontario government for road construction. Should not the surplus of this fund go to the municipalities?"

The Common Round

HOCKEY

If any hockey player or fan thinks I am going to write a dissertation on his favorite game, he may rest assured I have no desire to poach on his special preserve.

My knowledge of it nowadays is bounded on the north, south, east and west, by Foster Hewitt; for on Saturday evening from 9 to 10 plus, no matter what I may be doing, a certain amount of hockey penetrates my consciousness, and one look at the solemnity with which all Foster Hewitt's words are received by my better half, makes me feel that no levity will be tolerated.

But, there still remains the fact, that once, when I was VERY young, I played hockey. From that day to this, I've never been able to understand why I played it; for I didn't like to skate; I tired easily, and the very thought of the puck rushing toward me, gave me heart failure.

Of course, my best friend was engaged to Percy Lesueur, and I think he must have infected her with his own enthusiasm.

At any rate, behold me, rushing home one day, bursting into the living-room, and announcing, "We're going to have a hockey team!"

"Hockey!" exclaimed my mother.

"Hockey!" echoed my father, while two boys, who had wandered in, laughed in the irritatingly superior way boys of a certain age always do when they think girls are trying to do something they thought peculiarly their own prerogative.

"You're not serious," asked mother, when she had gained breath.

"Well, I guess so," said I, "Carleton Place and Perth have both got teams and do you suppose for a moment, we are going to let those places, particularly Perth, get ahead of us?"

At this moment Percy Lesueur and Georgie came in. "What do you think of the new team, Mr. Storey?" asked Perce, and father said feelingly, "I hope you hadn't anything to do with this crazy idea."

Perce evaded the question very diplomatically and Georgie and I retired to discuss costumes, which loomed much larger in our minds than any glory we might gain as members of a pioneer club.

Many times mother shook her head over the idiotic notion, but saw that the costume of velvet and fur I had set my heart on was ready for the first practice.

Will I ever forget it—the practice, not the costume! I think the girls were animated by a sort of fury; not theirs to be beaten by anyone, and if hard practice would make them ready to meet their opponents and enemies, hard practice there would be.

Gone was the peaceful, pleasant skating of the past; gone were the nice manners and social amenities.

"You goose, didn't you see that puck?" yelled a red-faced miss, while our captain looked us over despairingly and said coldly and not a little emphatically, "You're a set of ninnies, and I wish I need never see one of you again."

Meanwhile I was having troubles of my own. My nose came into a violent collision with someone's arm; someone's stick caught in the fur on my dress and tore a fine round off.

By this time, my head was aching, my nose swelling and every tooth in my head felt loose, while I wished my feet belonged to somebody else, and I didn't care whether I ever saw a rink again.

Suddenly, one player with more brains or a better idea of self-preservation than I possessed, flung down her stick, said simply, "I've had enough," and retired to the dressing-room.

One by one we sneaked after her, till only one intrepid figure was left, like brave Horatius, to defend our honor against the threat of Perth, had Perth been there.

When I hobbled home that day, mother looked at my dishevelled attire and mottled countenance. "Humph," said she expressively, "hockey doesn't improve your appearance."

"I want a hot bath and my bed," said I, too weary to care what anyone said.

Later, when propped up on pillows I drank some nice hot soup and counted my bruises, I vowed that hockey was for those who liked it, and later retired to the post of secretary-treasurer, and from a safe distance watched my comrades battle for a supremacy which they never achieved.

The craze only survived the one winter, and I had almost forgotten its existence, till listening to Percy Lesueur as commentator with Foster Hewitt.

No doubt nowadays, when girls are so much more clever at sports, my experience would only be by the way, but it, even viewed from this distance, was enough for me!

Chips and Chubby Are Tactless

BY RUTH DINGMAN HEBB

"There's certainly something to be said for the winter habits of the Squirrels and Mice," observed Mr. Pine Grosbeak, to his friend, the Purple Finch.

"To what do you refer particularly?" asked the Finch.

"I mean that habit of theirs of storing away provisions for the winter and then in time of need going around and digging up their stores out of the snow," explained the Grosbeak. "I wish we had some provisions all ready to use just now. Things aren't too brisk in the food-hunting line right now. Don't you agree?"

"I agree with you wholeheartedly," broke in Chips, the Chickadee, who happened to be in the same tree. "It keeps me hopping these days, to keep from actually feeling the pinch of hunger."

"Oh, we really don't do so badly though," said Chubby Nuthatch. "At least, I haven't heard any of our crowd grumbling the way those English Sparrows do. They seem to be always complaining that there isn't enough food or that nobody remembers to put out crumbs for them. Personally I think it would be a good thing if a few of them died off during the winter. Then there wouldn't be so many of them around to bother us."

"Oh, I'm sure some of them do die during the winter, even though we don't notice that there are any less of them," put in Chips.

"Say, I suppose we are being terribly tactless, running down the English Sparrows this way," he added. "It just occurred to me that they are relatives of yours, since you are members of the Sparrow family, Mr. Finch."

"Why, so are we," the Grosbeak hastened to say, "and it's perfectly all right to be critical of our cousins. We admit among ourselves that some of their characteristics are rather unfortunate, but of course when strangers run them down we don't actually talk against them."

"We console ourselves with the fact that some of the loveliest birds that are ever seen in this country are members of the Sparrow family," the Finch added. "Just to name a few of the best-looking birds that you ever saw, I will mention the Goldfinch, the Indigo Bunting, the Cardinal and the Rose-breasted Grosbeak. Think of the beauty of the song of the little Songsparrow, too. There are plenty of good musicians among us."

"Why, we are the largest and most important family of the perching birds, and I would say, the most important family of birds in the world," the Grosbeak put in, warming to his subject. "We are found in every country but Australia."

"At least, they don't have the English Sparrows there, to pester them then," said Chips. "The cruel part of it is that they aren't even natives of our country. Some misguided people brought them over for the purpose of destroying caterpillars, but they certainly don't do much caterpillar eating now."

"It's too bad," observed the Grosbeak sadly, "that a fine old family like ours, with its many beautiful members, should have reflections cast upon it because of objectionable relatives. Especially here in Canada where the unpopular ones are newcomers."

"When you come down to it," asked the Finch, "what have you got against the much abused English Sparrows? They don't really hurt anyone do they?"

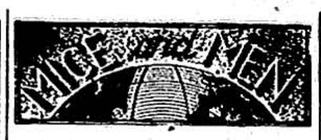

"Why, how can you say such an ignorant thing?" sputtered Chubby. "They drive other birds away in several different ways—that is, drive away much nicer and more charming and useful birds. They eat up all the food that the other birds need, they steal the best nesting places and they frighten other more gentle, and well-mannered birds by their rude and bull-dozing actions. We have learned that it's no use quarreling with them, there are too many of them. We just stay away from the places where they are."

"Oh, let's forget them and change the subject," suggested Chips, feeling that perhaps he and Chubby had said too much. "I'd like to know if you folks with so many relatives know them all. Don't you get your various cousins mixed up?"

"Oh, yes, sometimes," admitted the Finch. "We aren't all known as Sparrows, of course. We are called Sparrows, Linnets, Finches or Buntings. Then you can divide us up according to our habits if you like. There are the ground kinds, the tree kinds, the winter wanderers, like myself, the Snow Buntings, the Pine Siskins, and the Redpolls, and fourthly, the Grosbeaks. The ground members of the family are not as brightly colored as the tree-living members as a rule."

"We've been talking so eagerly that I didn't realize until now that the snow was falling so fast," interrupted Chubby. "If you'll excuse me, I think I'll make for shelter and get a bit warmer."

"That's a good idea," the others agreed and they scattered quickly, to get away from the wet flakes of snow that were coming down so fast.

"Yeah, I went to his office," moaned the jockey.

"I didn't' go in. When I got to his office there was a brass plate on the door: 'Dr. Kurem, Ten to One.' I wasn't going to bother with a long shot like that!"

BUILDING FOR BETTER HEALTH

Each year at the Christmas season we are asked to share our blessings with those who are less fortunate than we are. We are asked to help finance the Province-wide fight against tuberculosis.

Tuberculosis is a germ disease. It may affect any organ of the body, but parts most frequently attacked are the lungs, bones and glands. People are not born with tuberculosis and it is not inherited. The germs that cause it must come from some one who has the disease. Infections from cattle can be transmitted to human beings in milk and flesh of diseased animals. Therefore, unless milk is properly certified as coming from healthy cows, it should always be pasteurized. The great allies of the germ are overwork, strain, dissipation, insufficient food and all those elements that lower one's resistance. Although the germs are all about us, if we lead healthy lives we throw them off and do not contract the disease. Children, however, are more susceptible than grown-ups; therefore it is most important that their health be especially protected.

Recovery from tuberculosis is slow and its success depends upon an early discovery of the condition, and faithful adherence to all the requirements of the treatment. It cannot be cured by drugs or patent medicines. The methods of treatment to-day, while closely following those developed toward the end of the last century, rest, sunlight, fresh air, and proper food, under medical supervision, have been augmented by surgery, all combining to help the body in its fight against the ravages of the germs. A strong resolution to get well is a great help also in staging a successful battle.

The careful driver keeps his eyes on the road ahead, ever watchful of danger. When the red light signals, he stops. So, too, should we pause when tuberculosis signals—a persistent cough, loss of weight, over fatigue on slight exertion—bespeak a generally run-down condition, all danger signals of this disease too often unheeded.

Don't be afraid to consult a physician. He will diagnose your trouble, and don't lose heart if your fears are confirmed. With proper treatment there is every hope of recovery.

The Muskoka and Toronto Hospitals for Consumptives and the Queen Mary Hospital for Consumptive Children stand ready to serve all who are afflicted, but in this they must have the help of many friends.

Please will you aid this life-saving work by sending a contribution to National Sanitarium Association, 223 College Street, Toronto.

POLICE COURT

"PUT THAT HOUSE BACK"-MAGISTRATE

The case of John Foster, charged with theft of a house, which was adjourned for one week, was the first to be dealt with by Magistrate Woodliffe last Thursday.

"My client is ready to finish paying for the house at $5 a month," stated K. M. R. Stiver, counsel for the defence, "or he will move the shack back where it was."

"This house belongs to the complainant, Frank Bilston, and I order it to be returned to him and on his property by Jan. 27," ruled the magistrate. "I dismiss the charge of theft against Foster."

Frank J. Keating appeared for his brother Charles, who had been driving his truck.

"On Dec. 27 I stopped a truck driven by Charles Keating," testified Provincial Constable A. O. Ferguson. "This truck had one license plate missing, one headlight was out and one flare, and there was no reflector."

The magistrate asked why he didn't keep his trucks in running order and Mr. Keating replied that the flare was under the seat at the time and that he bought another license plate next morning.

"The truck is all fixed up now," stated Mr. Keating.

"Three dollars and costs or three days," imposed the magistrate.

Fred Billingsley was charged with speeding.

"I chased the accused up Yonge St. at 60 miles an hour and he drove through Aurora at 50 miles an hour," stated Constable Ferguson.

"Ten dollars and costs or ten days," ruled the magistrate. An adjournment of one week was given to Bryson Shields, charged with speeding.

John E. Mitchell pleaded "not guilty" to a charge of stealing "four tires, tubes, and rims, value less than $25," from Mrs. Adeline Eves.

Mrs. Eves took the witness stand and was questioned by N. L. Mathews, K. C.,

"I live on the third of East Gwillimbury and am married. I know Mr. Mitchell and he came and bought the car I had for sale some time in July, 1937. I sold him the car for $20. The terms were $5 down and the rest as soon as he could get it. The car was to be left with me until it was paid for. Mr. Mitchell agreed to these terms. The car was left there some time so I sent a letter to Mr. Mitchell, telling him to come and get the car out of the road and finish paying for it."

"What did Mr. Mitchell do then?" questioned Mr. Mathews.

"He came and ran the car outside and said to leave it there as he would come and get it in a short time. Then another day he came and tinkered around the car and after he left I went down to the car, and it was sitting there without any tires. Some time later he brought back one good tire and put it on the back. One day when I returned from town the good tire was missing also. I told Mr. Mitchell he had better get the tires back or there would be trouble.

"Mr. Mitchell said he had a good idea of who took the good tire," stated Mrs. Eves, "and I told him he had better pay me $10 for it."

Mr. Mitchell questioned Mrs. Eves as to whether the battery was any good or not. Mrs. Eves replied that the last time they had the car out, it worked all right.

"Mrs. Eves told me the car was in running order but you can't run a car without a battery," testified Mr. Mitchell. "I took the tires home and then brought them back but only one stood up so I took the others away with me. Another chap came and took the one good tire."

"You are to take those tires back to Mrs. Eves and put them on the car," ordered the Magistrate, "and they must be back by one week from today or Mrs. Eves will notify the clerk and you will appear for sentence."

Frank Thompson pleaded "guilty" to a charge of keeping a female dog when he had a license for a male dog.

"Mr. Curtis never asked me what kind of a dog it was," stated Mr. Thompson.

"Why, that's the very first question I always ask," said Mr. Curtis, "and you told me you had a male dog."

"You must pay the $3 difference for 1937 and in addition court costs within two weeks," imposed the magistrate. "In default of payment three days imprisonment."

Charles Bunn was charged with not purchasing a license for his dog. P. W. Pearson, clerk of the court, stated that Mr. Bunn had paid him $1 and was willing to pay the balance as soon as possible.

G. W. Curtis said he had made quite a few trips to the Bunn home and Mrs. Bunn always said: "My husband will come and see you," but he never came, said Mr. Curtis.

"I order that $1 be paid to the town with costs, or two days," ruled the magistrate.

Wm. Graham and Wm. Simpson, both charged with having liquor and being drunk, were remanded for sentence one week and allowed to go on bail of $300 each.

N. L. Mathews, K.C., asked for the remand in order that the "Swamp whiskey," allegedly found in their possession, could be analyzed.

GAME WARDEN IS STRICKEN AT 43

Suddenly from a heart attack, at his Virginia Beach home, Game Warden Francis Bernard "Barney" Lyons passed away last Friday evening. He was an active church worker of the St. Anthony's church, always attending whenever possible. He was the caretaker for a number of years, but gave it up two weeks previous to his death.

He had been York county game warden and inspector for the game and fisheries department for the last two years. He made few arrests and was known for his efforts to prevent poaching of fish and game through his personal influence, rather than by law enforcement only.

What a shock the community received on Friday evening when word was received of the dreadful tragedy on Lake Simcoe, when four people were drowned. Deepest sympathy to all those bereaved of friends and loved ones is sincerely expressed.

Mr. Pat Maloney has returned home again and is doing nicely after his tonsil operation.

Miss Phyllis Marritt has been spending a few days with her grandmother, Mrs. A. Knights.

Quite a number are suffering from severe colds, but fortunately none are serious.

Mr. Lawrence Facey was out on Sunday after his recent illness.

There is an increased attendance at church each Sunday.

The pastor, Rev. J. R. Armstrong has preached some exceedingly fine sermons of late, which have been very inspiring.

A fine interest is shown at the prayer meetings each week and Mr. Armstrong is taking up a splendid series of lessons from the gospel of John.

Virginia

Another accident occurred at Virginia Beach on Tuesday morning, shortly after eight o'clock, when Eric Thompson from North Gwillimbury, who was drawing logs from Georgina Island, went through the ice with his team and sleigh, about a mile from the beach.

Owing to the fact that Mr. Thompson was alone, he could not get the team out, but had to go to the Hadden farm, where a number were soon reached by telephone.

Unfortunately the horses were in the icy water so long that one died before they could get it out, while the other horse died shortly after being removed.

"How far down do you want to sit?" asked the ticket-man of a woman at the box office window.

"Why, all the way, of course," she snapped.

Udora

"I'm one of the girls who make up the telephone directory. Accuracy — with a capital A — is the big aim on my job. There are thousands of chances for errors in the spelling of all those names, initials, addresses and telephone numbers. But we're mighty careful in our effort to get every letter and figure exactly right because to us they're not just names and numbers — they're people — our customers — and telephones."

Your name in the telephone book may be worth many times the small cost of telephone service. Can people find you when they want you? The telephone book is the city's calling list.

Reductions in telephone rates—local and long distance — in 1935, '36 and '37 have effected savings to telephone users in Ontario and Quebec of nearly one million dollars yearly.

NEWMARKET SENIORS ARE VICTORIOUS

Barrie, Orillia and Newmarket high schools were represented at a basketball tournament held last Saturday in Barrie Collegiate Institute. Four teams, boys' and girls' senior and junior, from each school played to a three corner tie, each school winning eight points. Newmarket senior girls and boys were victorious but the juniors lost their games. The Barrie teams were hosts at a lunch given the visitors on Saturday. The Newmarket players left Friday evening by train and returned Saturday afternoon.

LOCALS WIN BROOM BALL

Local Lions defeated Bradford Lions by two games to one of broom ball at Bradford on Monday night. Newmarket players were Harry Lambert, Bill Bosworth, Herman Gilroy, Albert Skelton, Bill White, Dave Lipson (goal), Dr. Gordon Cock, Bob Stevens, Jack Luck, Wilford Duffy, Art Evans, Bert Morrison, Alex. Eves, Dr. Carl Vandervoort and Walter Eves.

VETERANS WILL MEET

Consider Seats For Town Hall

Criticism of the badminton club and praise of the revolver club for care of the part of the town hall each uses marked the report of Councillor Arthur Evans of the property committee to the town council Monday evening.

Mr. Evans recommended a committee of the council and merchants to "revive interest in the market and to bring it in line with successful markets."

Mr. Evans suggested that the badminton club use the ground floor of the building instead of the top floor.

New seating would cost $1,200, he reported, but questioned whether it was advisable to go to that expense until arrangements had been made about the badminton club.

"You will have to read the riot act to the club or they will lose their privileges," said Mayor Dr. S. J. Boyd.

Councillor A. V. Higginson said he found things in an untidy and unsafe condition near the stove.

Concerning the market Deputy-Reeve Joseph Vale said: "We have a population in the neighborhood of 4,200, the largest outside Toronto, and we might advertise it through the local press."

The suggestion of Councillor Wm. Dixon that Jack Weir look after the town hall was accepted. Reeve Dr. L. W. Dales suggested that the night patrol should visit the building every night to see that it was properly locked and that everything was in order.

Start Garbage Removal April

Recommendations for a garbage removal system to begin the first week in April were brought in by a committee headed by Councillor Arthur Evans at a town council meeting Monday evening.

"Aurora with 2,752 population has a cost of $1,000," said Mr. Evans. "It takes four or five days to handle the garbage in Aurora. Newmarket with a population of 4,350 could be divided into two districts. It should be done for from $1,800 to $2,000."

Garbage would probably be removed twice a week. Definite plans will be prepared and tenders called for, it was decided.

FACE BONE BROKEN

Playing in the commercial league Monday evening, Bruce Prest had a bone in his face broken when another player bumped into him. Dr. J. G. Cock today took him to the Toronto General Hospital, where he is making favorable progress.

WOULD ABOLISH COUNTY COUNCILS

Real estate should be relieved of the burden of secondary education costs, Mayor Dr. S. J. Boyd told the mayors' conference in Toronto yesterday.

"The municipalities interested would be glad to have all the county councils removed," Dr. Boyd also said. "There would be no loss and a financial gain. Canada has 7,000 governing bodies for ten million people. Britain has 400 for 50 million people."

HEAR PERCY TAKE

LEAD GRABBED BY SPECIALTY

BY GEORGE HASKETT, JR.

In the opening game of the doubleheader at the arena on Monday, the Office Specialty secured a tight grip on first place, in the local group, by a very impressive 4-0 victory over their local rivals, the Davis Leather.

Red Waller notched two counters in the first period for the Specialty to open the scoring, while the second period went scoreless and Johnny O'Halloran ran up the Office Specialty total to four on his two counters in the final period.

Although the tanners kept up the pressure throughout the final period, they were unable to beat Joe Tunney in the Specialty nets, who turned in another high-class goal-tending chore. Tunney, along with Red Waller, was the pick of the winners although it would be unfair to select any stars, as every man turned in a real game.

For the losers, Howard Brown, Alf. Harden and Bohmer Groves looked the best and never gave up trying to break into the scoring column.

Mount Albert Loses

In the second game Mount Albert lost their third straight game in as many starts by a 3-2 decision to the Town club. Thompson opened the scoring for Mount Albert in the first period, while Pete Neufeld tied up the count before the end of the period.

In the second W. Jones added another to the Town score, while Stokes scored for Mount Albert to knot up the count and McComb made it 3-2 for the Towners early in the final period. The latter were able to hold the Mounties from further scoring until the final gong. The town club, coached by E. Neal, and managed by Arnold Molyneaux, are rounding into a real team, having two good forward lines in Bennitz, Jones and Hartford on the first line and McComb, Forhan and Neufeld on the second line, and should be right in there when the finals come around.

Next Week

The Mercantile league games scheduled for Monday evening, Jan. 24, will bring together the Davis Leather and the Town in the first game, starting at 7.30 p.m., and the winner of this battle will go into undisputed possession of second place in the group. While the second game between Mount Albert and the Office Specialty will get under way at 9 p.m. These two struggles should give the fans a real night of fun and should pack the arena to see the battle for a place in the finals. Admission for the two games is only ten cents and everybody will be well advised to be on hand to see the Mercantilers go.

MARKIES TIE

Donald put the lakeshores in the lead when he poked his own rebound past Peters. Both Townsley and Shepstone came close on dangerous counter-attacks. Hodges pulled Roberts' pins out from under him with Hedges five feet away, but the O.H.A. looked the other way. Roberts knotted the count on Ogilvie's rebound at the half-way mark. The Sutton twine had a hole in it and the game was held up while one of the fishermen sewed it together.

Sutton broke away on a four-man rush but Peat out-gessed them and stopped them alone. Milroy accidentally bodied the referee and the O.H.A. took a fall on his prestige. Draper had a swell chance but bungled by not passing to Hunt who was in the open. Carpentier slashed Ogilvie and Newmarket pressed but couldn't beat Smith. McCrea tested Smith just as the gong sounded.

Battle To Draw

Carpentier put the northerners in the lead again with a drive from right wing, with Shupe running perfect interference in latest Notre Dame style. MacDonald was conspicuous by his tripping, a felony he indulged in throughout the game without getting a rest.

Bernard tied the score for the Reds when he fired the rubber through a maze of legs to beat Smith. Townsley had Smith on the run when he forced the goalie to turn aside three shots in a row. Peters saved when Carpentier tried to snake the rubber around the post from behind.

Someone plunked Hedges on the shins with the puck and the official had to take time out and lean on the boards for a few minutes. Peters beat Carpentier and Milroy in succession and the Markles came right back to rain three shots at Smith. Ogilvie stopped a butt-end and had to retire for the rest of regular time. The left winger took plenty all night but came up with a grin every time.

Overtime

Both outfits were plenty tired by the end of the regulation time and play was not as fast in the extra ten minutes. Townsley nearly broke the tie poking the puck between the Sutton defence but Smith beat him. Bernard nearly broke away but MacDonald fell and clamped a leg scissors on him and stopped Wink dead in his tracks.

But again the official was looking the other way. Brady was a big help to his team in the overtime when his poke-check was working 100 per cent. Brady and Crozier came close and Hunt and Draper retaliated for the Redmen. Milroy tripped Roberts but it was merely just one of those things. Brady had a nice chance but the whole Newmarket squad piled into the net and he needed a tank to go through. Hedges managed to get in the road just before the end as Townsley got away on a dangerous rush. Thus the pastime ended in a tie.

Smith, in the nets, Crozier on the defence and Milroy, MacDonald and Carpentier were the pick of the Sutton team. MacDonald spoiled an otherwse effective night's work by his inclination for tripping and he got away with plenty of it. For the Redmen Ogilvie, Townsley, McCrea and Bernard stood out up front while Roberts and Peat turned in a steady game on the blue line.

Sutton: goal, Smith; defence, Shupe and Crozier; centre, Milroy; wings, MacDonald and Carpentier; alternates, Brady, Schmidt, Mackenzie, Burkholder and Hodges.

Newmarket: goal, Peters; defence, Roberts and Peat; centre, Hunt; wings, Ogilvie and Shepstone; alternates, Townsley, McCrea, Bernard, Draper and Hunter.

Referee: Bert Hedges, Toronto.

SUTTON WALKS AWAY

Ogilvie and the wingman slashed back, both getting a rest. Sutton finally came to their senses and tried to snap out of their trance but the Redmen kept the game slow by heaving the rubber to the other end. Schmidt stole the puck from Roberts and gave Peters an anxious moment. The crowd gave Bernard a nice hand when the be-spectacled winger nearly beat Smith on a solo rush.

Milroy took a little riding at the Red defence, with Carpentier doing the vocal honors to Armstrong. An elbow-high shot from the blue line by Milroy accounted for the second Sutton counter, a tough shot that slipped through between Peters' body and arm. Townsley had a beautiful chance just before the bell went but Smith pulled off a smart diving save to beat the canny centreman.

Sutton Adds Trio

MacDonald slapped Milroy's pass into the Newmarket twine in the first minute of play to put the "stovies" three up. Then they both resorted to the "shoot-it-up-the-ice" mode of play until Townsley and Shepstone led two dangerous rushes for the Reds. Crozier and Roberts had a little shoving match but nothing happened.

Smith beat McCrae when the new winger was right in. Shepstone was bashed in the head but continued. From a face-off in Sutton territory Burkholder broke away, and consted in on Peters to hang up the fourth counter. Shupe and Ogilvie indulged in what was supposed to be fisticuffs.

Smith chested Townsley's shot and smothered the rebound fighting for his shut-out. Crozier broke away with MacDonald, and the rest is history, the defenceman smacking "Pepper's" pass into the hemp behind Peters. Milroy broke away alone just before the bell but Peters made a swell save on a hard close-in shot.

Sutton's first line of MacDonald, Milroy, and Carpentier were right on and stood out, as did Crozier, while Smith played a cool steady net. Peters in the nets and Peat on the blue-line took the orchids for the local squad, while the forwards were all decidedly off their game.

Sutton: goal, Smith; defence, Crozier and Shupe; centre, Milroy; wings, MacDonald and Carpentier; alternates, Brady, Schmidt, Mackenzie, Burkholder and Hodges.

Newmarket: goal, Peters; defence, Roberts and Peat; centre, Townsley; wings, Shepstone and Gibney; alternates, Hunt, McCrae, Ogilvie, Bernard and Woodcock.

Referee: Army Armstrong, Oshawa.

Jubilee Plans Include Skating Carnival Here

Former Residents Will Be Invited To All Jubilee Functions

CLERK MADE SECRETARY

Plans made by a jubilee committee meeting on Wednesday night call for the formation of a "jubilee association." A membership fee will be charged and a souvenir medal given to each member.

J. G. McDonald suggested that the town hold an ice carnival around the middle of February. A date will be set at a meeting next week. C. E. Sparks, A. M. Kirkwood and Fire Chief Rowe were added to the entertainment committee to assist in the carnival preparations.

M. L. Andrews, chairman of the entertainment committee, will resign to take over the job of permanent secretary of the jubilee committee. He will get extra help as needed.

The meeting considered the matter of inviting the Mendelssohn choir of Toronto to stage a concert here while they are up this way on their proposed picnic in May. It was revealed that $300 would be necessary to bring the 250-voice choir to Aurora. This, and the question of weather have deferred a decision until a later meeting.

Votes of thanks were expressed to the United church choir, to Rev. G. S. Despard, to Dr. C. R. Boulding, and to the ladies of the United church for their part in the thanksgiving service last Sunday.

It was decided to open a register to permit Aurorans to send in names of former residents and friends who should be invited to attend the jubilee functions throughout the year.

RISING SUN LODGE TO HOLD LADIES' NIGHT

The annual "ladies' night" of the Rising Sun Lodge A.F. and A.M., will be held on Wednesday of next week. A banquet and entertainment will be held in the high school, following which the officers and members will go to the Royal theatre.

ABOUT TOWN

THANK YOU, DOCTOR

Aurora's Jubilee mayor, Dr. C. R. Boulding, celebrated his birthday on Friday. Congratulations! We don't know which one it is—for once we're too polite to ask—but we hope he has many more. And in our opinion it's about time Aurora started celebrating Dr. Boulding.

We've bumped into the mayor at two points . . . at council meetings and at the "what-shall-we-do's" that form the meetings of the hockey executive. Never have we bumped with greater relish.

With a tactful consideration of the many problems of council and with a cheerful shouldering of his responsibilities as mayor, the doctor—if hockey methods obtained in municipal politics—should be playing in the big leagues now.

Council chambers too often become stages for futile argument and councillors, in consequence, find themselves the objects of abuse more often than praise. Aurora's council chamber, in contrast, offers its occupants an opportunity for genuine service, and has attracted some of the best of the town's business and professional men.

For much of this happy condition we think the mayor should be blamed. We say "we think" because there may be something we don't know . . . or are we just being modest? At any rate, if we were to become a councillor, we'd like to work under Dr. Boulding.

When we smiled our winning smile last November and talked ourself into the job of secretary-treasurer of the hockey club, we again found ourself cluttering up the mayor's doorstep. The club had the mayor's co-operation before it even started, and he became the honorary president, with the club getting the most of the honor.

A hockey club is as easy to run as a three-ring circus—all you have to do is please the players, the fans and the owner of the tent . . . and find the money with which to do it. After the season had got started, a dazed look crept into our eyes. At mid-season we find we're talking to ourselves . . . and none too plainly, either.

If ever we regain sanity it will be the fault of Dr. Boulding. The padded cells have been yawning for us for weeks. We had a lucid moment in the dressing-room on Friday night, at the end of the second period. The score was 4-1 . . . against us.

"We're not licked yet, boys," a cheery voice shouted.

At the end of the third period the score was 6-4 . . . still against us. But if we were beaten, we haven't heard the doctor or the team admit it. That's what we like about the doctor.

And incidentally—that's what we like about the team.

JUBILEE JUNIORS DINE IN NEWMARKET HOME

INSTITUTE PLANS BASKET FOR SICK

The Women's Institute branch of Aurora will meet on Thursday of next week at the home of Mrs. W. Boaks, Harrison Ave. Hostesses are Mrs. Boaks, Mrs. F. Grainger, Mrs. Gleaves, and Mrs. Reid. The roll call will be answered by "My New Year's resolution," and by a gift for a basket for the sick.

MEN'S CLOTHES TO BE LOUD AND LARGE

"Green hats!" Fred Rowland declared, answering The Era's query concerning style trends for men in '38.

"I bought a green hat last summer," the reporter muttered. "I didn't have the nerve to wear it. I gave it to a friend in the big city."

"I bought one too," Mr. Rowland confessed. "And I'm going to drag it out this year."

"How about shirts?" the reporter asked.

"Shirts," said Mr. Rowland, "will be checked. There will be a lot of cream flannel shirts worn this year."

Trousers, in "palm beach" material, will be popular also in checks, both large and small, The Era learned.

"How about colors?" the reporter wanted to know.

"The brighter the better," Mr. Rowland stated, but with a doleful shake of his head, qualified his statement. "But they won't wear them here."

Aurorans, it seems, are a little conservative in dress, and are content to follow the styles from a distance.

C. E. Sparks, it was observed at the meeting of council last week, is right in style with a brown suit in a faint checked pattern. The mayor looks well in a suit several shades lighter in color than the usual navy blue, and usually wears a blue tie diagonally striped. The reeve shows a partiality to blue serge and the deputy-reeve is customarily garbed in dark grey.

The rest of the councillors maintain their dignity in varied shades of blue, grey and black, nearly all cloths having a faint stripe in the pattern. The council favors soft, collar-attached shirts, plainly striped, by a vote of six to two.

"Comfort as well as style will be sought in 1938," Wm. Lindenbaum predicted of men's tailoring styles. "Coats will be roomy in the shoulder and chest. Trousers will be full at the waist and at the knee, narrowing at the cuff."

"You're just a week too early," W. R. McQuade told The Era. Mr. McQuade is planning a trip to a style convention in Chicago. He will probably have plenty of news on his return.

Locals Tied For Top Hockey Group Place

Survive "Hill's" Final Period Splurge To Win By 11-8

PLAY SCARBORO FRIDAY

After two periods of sane hockey on Tuesday night during which the Jubilee Juniors earned a 5-1 edge over the Richmond Hill squad, the locals lifted the defensive bars to let the rose-growers through for seven goals.

"Shorty" Wrightman led the scoring for the Jubilees, and Wilson also tallied some brilliant counters. "Turk" Ferguson got one of the best of the night when he skated through the Hill boys to pass to Wrightman, take a return pass, and fool the goalie with a fine shot.

Failure of the Jubilees to watch their checks plus a little over-confidence gained from the first two easy periods, accounts for the high score of Richmond Hill. The locals, however, kept at the top of the heap with an 11-8 win.

At present they are tied with Stouffville for first place. East York and Stouffville battle it out tonight and the result may see a marked difference in the standing, particularly if the Jubilees can take a win from the hard-fighting Scarboro squad here on Friday night.

JUBILEE DEFENDERS

"Turk" Ferguson and Captain "Fat"James, Jubilee defense stalwarts, have been giving the opposition plenty of trouble this winter. Both boys expect to see lots of action when they meet the hard-checking Scarboro lads in the local arena on Friday night.

Thirteenth Game On Friday Finds Jubilees Out-Lucked

East York Shows Strength To Hand Aurorans First Loss

East York's fast, hard-checking hockey squadron sailed into Aurora on Friday night to unload into the unwilling arms of the Jubilee Juniors their first defeat in the O. H. A. series, to the amazement of a well-packed arena. The score was 6-4 in favor of the visitors.

The Era reporter, after a careful check of "shots-on-goal" found the Jubilees had the best of it, and cast about elsewhere for reasons for the defeat.

He found the following: (a) the game was the Jubilees' 13th, was played on a Friday and they waited for the 13th minute of the game to score their first tally; (b) it was the locals' first home game of the series and they were put off their game by hearing a crowd cheer for them instead of against them; (c) Wilson, Wrightman and Myers had such bad colds that the dressing room sounded like a consumptives' convention; and, (d) the East Yorkers scored more goals.

East York pulled a fast one and in the first 30 seconds of play the Akley-Mueller combination had scored the first goal. The Jubilees carried the play from then on, but so effective were the close, back-checking tactics of the Yorkers that it was 13 minutes before Mair tied the score on an assist from Wilson.

The second period belonged to the visitors. Smith, their goalie, turned in a stand-out performance, while his team-mates scored three. Akney, Brown and Mueller were the scorers.

A dressing room session found the Jubilees still jubilant, but Wilson and Wrightman were coughing like Jack Benny's Maxwell. Both refused to quit.

Wilson, with the help of Bore raised the fans' cheers with a swell goal, and they began to hope that the home team would end the game with their usual third-period scoring spree.

East York came right back, however, when Mueller made the scored three. Akley, Brown and East Yorker was penalized for rough play and their goalie shone to stave off six shots in as many seconds. McComb got back into form by skating through the defense to tally another for the Jubilees.

The visitors showed the pressure put on them by the Aurora attack, shooting down the ice to clear. Ferguson and Tranan tangled and both went off. Later, Bone was sent off for battling, and East York took advantage of the opportunity to make it 6-3.

Wilson scored to earn the fourth Aurora counter. On a wild dash goal-ward, Wilson, with only one defenseman to beat, was elbowed into the goal post. Both players and goal-post crashed to the ice, Wilson with a badly bruised shoulder.

Tunney, playing in goal behind an out-lucked team, had plenty of opportunities to show his skill and came through with flying colors. On one occasion three Yorkers broke clear of the defense and Tunney robbed them of the surest goal of the night.

Axe Must Fall On Moderate Drinker, W.C.T.U. Informed

Says Bootlegger, Government Equally Guilty In Liquor Sale

"Some people believe that liquor offers a way of escape from painful circumstances," Dr. J. S. Glenn stated in an address on the causes of drinking, given before the W.C.T.U. in the United church parlors on Tuesday afternoon.

"Men who have lost their wives, men with financial trouble, men and women with unhappy homes or poor health, sometimes feel that liquor creates within them a more pleasant world than that in which they live," he declared.

Another cause of drinking was that liquor offered an escape from conscience and moral restrictions, the speaker believed. Burglars, before committing a crime, might drink to dull finer sensibilities, he pointed out.

"Young people, looking for excitement, will take liquor," Dr. Glenn said. "In war soldiers are given rum before they go over the top, so that they can butcher in the most cold-blooded fashion. The militarists know human nature, that is why they use rum.

"How many divorces have their beginnings in cocktail parties?" he asked, to bear out his contention that men and women often used liquor to free them from moral restrictions.

Many drank to raise themselves in the esteem of their pals, to be "one of the gang" or because they were afraid of ridicule if they refused to follow the crowd, it was stated.

Another cause of drinking lay in the light regard that many non-drinkers had for the problem, he felt.

"Laughing at the antics of drunkards encourages them," he warned. "It is no laughing matter, especially when they are laughed at in the presence of children and young people, who begin to look less seriously on this sort of thing.

"Liquor is always the handmaiden of every sin," Dr. Glenn said.

Advertising played a part in encouraging people to drink, he held. Direct advertising might be curtailed but there was much indirect advertising of beer, wine and soft drinks which familiarized people with the bottle.

"The fact that money can be made through the selling of drink is one of the chief causes," he stated. "Non-drinkers are often not adverse to accepting dividends on liquor stocks.

"Liquor interests have endowed many a cathedral and educational institution, and endowments speak louder than words. The problem of the W.C.T.U. is not in the confirmed drinker but in the moderate user," the speaker warned. "Those who hold their liquor well are those on whom the axe should fall.

"It is stupid to say we can take it or leave it alone. We cannot take a little theft or murder and leave it alone. The amount makes no difference. Sooner or later drink gets a man, and once is enough. The whole future can be jeopardized by one foolish decision.

"Some people feel that the selling of liquor is alright if the government does it. If it is wrong for the bootlegger, it is wrong for the government. The same set of morals cover both.

"Our morals depend on religious faith," Dr. Glenn concluded. "The strong point of your association is the second letter in W. C. T. U."

TOWN GIVES JUBILEES BIG HAND ON FRIDAY

Mayor Dr. C. R. Boulding, honorary president of the Aurora Junior Hockey Club, faced off the puck for the Friday game against East York. He made a stirring appeal from centre ice for fair play from players and fans. The mayor, whose birthday it was, brought to the game his daughters, Elizabeth and Anne, and the little daughter of Reeve Bert Knowles.

The club were guests of a Yonge St. restaurant after the game, and plans were made to attend the united thanksgiving service on Sunday.

Roy De La Haye, also an officer of the club, brought the town band to the game. Their playing before the game and between periods brought numerous compliments from the crowd and added color to the game.

Flower Growers Urged To Learn Through Competing

Charles Dodson Suggests Beautifying Town And Gardens

The local horticulturalists should have three objects in mind this summer, Charles Dodson, newly elected president of the Horticultural Society told the meeting held in the high school on Tuesday of last week.

First, he suggested, they should beautify their own gardens. Secondly, they should do all they can to beautify the town, particularly in Aurora's jubilee year. Their third object should be to compete in all flower shows. By so doing, he pointed out, they could do more to further their knowledge of horticulture than would be possible by any other means.

Clerk's Records Disclose Interest Of Town's Story

Church Packed For Town's Jubilee Service Of Thanksgiving

"This is anniversary year," Town Clerk M. L. Andrews announced at the beginning of the thanksgiving service which filled every pew in the United church on Sunday evening.

"It is 75 years this week since the first council of the village of Aurora held its first meeting," he stated. "It is 50 years today since the first council of Aurora as a town was convened.

"The first council of the village in 1863, was composed of Chas. Doan, Seth Ashton, Robt. Boyd, Jas. Halliday and G. L. Stevenson. It was sworn in by R. J. Irwin and selected Chas. Doan as its chairman and he thus became the first reeve.

"C. H. York was the first clerk. He was instructed to purchase minute book paper and a seal and was not to spend more than $5 in the orgy of buying.

"Among those who served in other appointments that year were Henry Harris, Jacob Wells, Robt. Mosley, Geo. Moore, Jos. Hunt, Jas. Pargiter, S. P. Irwin, J. Walton, Ed. Stephenson, John Kersopp and Thos. Harris.

"The new village was very ambitious," Mr. Andrews declared. "They had their chamber of commerce and were determined to see Aurora grow.

"The dedication of the newly incorporated town was held in this building on the evening of Jan. 16, 50 years ago today; and the new council met during the day. It was composed of Mayor J. R. Rutherford, Reeve A. Yule, Deputy-Reeve C. C. Robinson, and nine councillors elected by wards: H. W. Fleury, D. McLeod, W. B. Richardson, G. D. Patterson, J. T. Davis, J. W. Lloyd, J. C. Querrie, W. G. Lloyd and H. Wells.

"The installation of the waterworks was under way, the fire alarm system was installed, the first local board of health was appointed and the town was firmly established as to municipal government.

"The cemetery is an institution inseparably bound up with the history of any community and the one belonging to this municipality was located in the year 1868. The first interment was that of a child, A. D. McCallum, on July 11, 1869, with H. D. Landy acting as clergyman at the service.

"Mr. Doan was the first president of the board and among other members were Jos. Fleury, Ben. Pearson and Geo. Graham. Mr. Doan's membership on the board continued for many years and the 1,000th interment occurred before his retirement.

"During the year," Mr. Andrews concluded, "it is expected that our anniversary celebrations will take various forms, and it is fitting that the commencement should be in the form of a church service arranged for the whole community."

Dr. E. J. Thompson gave the invocation and led the congregation in the responsive reading. Rev. G. O. Lightbourn gave the prayer, following a quartette composed of Miss Audrey Grieves, Mrs Wm. Ward, and Misses Lelia and Helen Boynton.

Dr. C. R. Boulding sang the Lord's Prayer as a solo, accompanied by Mrs. Boulding at the piano. Handel's Hallelujah Chorus was sung by the mass choir.

The address was given by Rev. G. S. Despard of Toronto, who was rector of the Anglican church here 25 years ago.

Farmer Must Gain If Merchant To Prosper, Trade Board Told

Over 75 Attend Splendid Program Of Board Of Trade

The dinner meeting of the board of trade, held Tuesday night in the high school, was one of the best attended in years. Over 75 were present.

Lorne C. Lee gave the toast to the king, George Leacock's toast to the town was responded to by the mayor, Dr. C. R. Boulding; J. M. Walton gave the toast to the ladies, to which Mrs. J. Closs responded. Dr. L. W. Dales, Newmarket reeve, spoke briefly. The study of community welfare, he stated, made the town a much better place in which to live.

Dr. J. S. Glenn, of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church, gave a short address, after which the speaker of the evening, R. T. Kelley of Hamilton, was introduced by G. T. Wardley.

The building of community spirit was one of the great objects in life, Mr. Kelley stated.

"Every business transaction must show a profit to all parties concerned if it is to be good business," he said.

He advised his listeners to analyze their trading area. To succeed, townsmen must interest themselves in the problems of the neighboring farmers. The farmers must make a profit if the merchant was to prosper, the speaker said.

ANGLICAN GUILD NAMES OFFICERS

The Trinity church parish guild will meet at the parish hall on Tuesday. At the annual meeting of the guild, held at the home of Miss Eva Lemon, Mosley St., on Tuesday of last week, Mrs. J. H. Elmsley was elected president.

Mrs. W. Boaks and Mrs. C. Reed will have charge of Dorcas work and Miss Beryl Phillips will handle publicity.

Popular Aurora Couple Feted On 35th Wedding Anniversary

Forty Attend Dinner For Mr. and Mrs Allin On Friday

An event of interest to a wide circle of friends took place last Friday evening, when Mr. and Mrs. Percy Allin, Catharine Ave., gave a dinner to some 40 guests, the occasion being the 35th anniversary of their wedding.

The rooms of their home were beautifully decorated for the occasion and at 7 o'clock the guests sat down to a tastefully prepared dinner which was climaxed with a large wedding cake, upon which were 35 candles and which was duly cut by the bride.

Those who assisted in serving were Mrs. Herbert Oliver, Mrs. Charles Ryan, Miss Jeanette Empringham and Miss Jean Powell. Mrs. Lottie Snider of Stouffville and Mrs. Wm. Powell served at the tea urn following dinner.

The evening was spent in an impromptu program. The Rev. W. A. Westcott was chairman and those participating in the program were: Grant Morley, a nephew, piano solo; Mr. and Mrs. Roy Morley, sister and brother-in-law, duet; Mrs. Roy Grove, a niece, reading; Mrs. Herbert Oliver, a daughter, solo; Mr. Charles Atkinson, solo; a quartet by Mrs. P. Allin, Mrs. Wm. Powell, Mrs. R. Morley and Miss Lottie Atkinson.

Interspersed in the program were speeches by many old friends and relatives, and many amusing stories were told of the old days and all expressed heartiest congratulations to the "bride and groom" and wished them many more happy years of married life together. Mr. Allin graciously replied, remarking that he and Mrs. Allin were delighted to have so many friends with them to celebrate the milestone in their lives. He thanked all for their many expressions of good wishes.

Mr. and Mrs. Allin received many beautiful and useful gifts from their guests. The gift of the groom to the bride was a silver tea service and a bouquet of 35 roses. The evening came to a close when all joined hands and sang "Blest be the tie that binds."

PLAN JUBILEE EUCHRE

The celebration committee of L.O.L. 643, Aurora, are starting the season's activities toward a successful July 12 celebration by holding a big jubilee euchre in the Orange hall, on the evening of Jan. 24 at 8.30. Everyone is welcome. There will be good prizes and refreshments.

Pottageville

Mr. Ed. O'Brien and some friends spent Saturday afternoon and evening tobogganing and skiing on the ridges at Pottageville. There were about 70 or more in 17 cars. It was quite a sight for Pottageville at this time of the year. After an enjoyable time they went away in two or more cars at a time back to the city.

Mr. S. Williams and family visited their parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. Williams.

Miss Helen Ollikainen held a party for her twelfth birthday. Many of her girl friends were there and other invited guests, numbering 25 in all. A nice supper was served.

The United church Sunday-school and worship service was held last Sunday. Rev. H. W. Strapp superintended both services.

TREAT A CHEST COLD WITHOUT DELAY

Doctors will tell you that a chest cold can be dangerous. Treat it early with Penetro, the modern medicated improvement on that favorite old home remedy, mutton suet.

The mutton suet base penetrates, carrying the healing medicaments to the seat of the trouble, helping nature to increase the blood flow and break up the congestion. At the same time, Penetro's aromatic vapours help to clear stuffed-up nasal passages and soothe inflamed bronchial tissues.

At all drug stores — 25c, 50c, and 60c. Free sample mailed on request; J. T. Wait Co. Ltd., Montreal.

The third section of Jubilee enumerated at the organization meeting held in the town hall was that of physical health. As had been the practice with music and with pageantry, ten people each undertook to bring together ten more people to plan for the physical health of the town. Among these were medical doctors, dentists, osteopaths and nurses.

Now all of these people were familiar with the famous Hippocratic Oath which sets forth the proposition that the practitioner has many obligations that are superior to profit. Each believed that he should serve, to the best of his ability, those who were ill and suffering. Each treated and advised his patient in such a way as should restore his health. Each was fully aware that the more rapidly the patient was restored, the less would be the doctor's income from the case. But, as I have said, there were obligations superior to profit. The doctor's first consideration was the welfare of his patient. That the doctor needed to receive a living from his services was obvious; but the service must come first.

Each of the health servants had often racked his brains for a means to heal some suffering patient. But never had all of them come together with the common thought of promoting the health of all the people in the community. Of course, the town council had its regular officer of health as in any other municipality. It was his responsibility to ensure a certain minimum of sanitation, lighting and sanitation in public places. But beyond that no comprehensive attack on ill health had ever been made.

At the first meeting of these ten study groups on physical health there was a general agreement that "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure." Then ensued an animated discussion on the chief causes of ill health. There was general agreement that a great proportion of human ills could be prevented by more intelligent care of the body.

Someone ventured that the reason so many quack companies made fortunes selling cures for "faulty elimination" was that a great many people do suffer from constipation, to which many other ills are traceable; rather than undertake what they suspect might become expensive doctor bills, they place their faith in pink pills and mineral salts. After a brief relief they find themselves again in misery, possibly leading to serious complications. Even farmers would feed their horses bran mashes with good effect; then they, themselves, would respond to the claims of cure-alls. If they would only learn something of the art and science of eating. At the first public monthly meeting held on physial health the town was addressed by a noted dietitian.

Space and time forbid that I should tell how, by a combination of co-operative organization and municipal enterprise, the people of the town and district set up a form of health service which functioned primarily to prevent illness; how the health servants attacked the problem together, organized a clinic and built a hospital; how they added to their number a highly trained woman, who inspired the confidence of local women; how they made knowledge of sex as much a normal part of education as had been a knowledge of sanitation; how they finally reduced malnutrition to a minimum; and how the health servants secured a new security and new achievements for themselves.

The foundation for all these accomplishments was laid in the year of jubilee.

Housecleaning

BY GOLDEN GLOW

As soon as we get the Christmas holidays safely over, our minds, I mean the minds of the feminine portion of us, turn to house-cleaning! And we make a brave start by tackling first the bureau drawers, and the dresser drawers and the numerous other drawers in the house. It is truly surprising, too, the articles we turn up that we had entirely forgotten, and we are amazed at what has accumulated since the last "over-hauling," in spite of good resolutions at New Year's.

After I started this I recalled something on the subject, copied once from " Tony's Scrap Book" (Tony Wons), that we used to hear over the radio every day and enjoy. So I hunted it up, and it certainly made me smile, so I'll copy it here—I hope Tony won't mind, but it does seem to fit in so well with what I'd just written.

From "Tony's Scrap Book" of 1934-1935: '"If a house contains six bureaus, eleven armoires, seven chiffoniers and fifty-three miscellaneous drawers, how many of them is the husband entitled to, and how many is the wife?" asked the young clubman.

'The second clubman laughed harshly. "You are young and have much to learn," he said. "You may as well understand first as last that if there were in your house, a mile of bureaus, three acres of armoires and 17,000 drawers, all these would still be stuffed full of veils, ruchings, hat-pins, ribbons, silk stockings, petticoats, powder-puffs and safety pins; and the best course for you to pursue would be to wrap your own things—your shirts, underclothes, and so on in a newspaper and keep them under the bed."

Honestly, I do not know why we women fill our bureau drawers with such a lot of useless things—but I do think we are, nowadays, much better in that respect, because things come so much more easily than in former times, and again we are not so sentimental. That old song—well no—not so old—called "Among My Souvenirs," that was sung so much a few years ago, "I find a rose from you among my souvenirs, etc., etc.," makes me think of the days when girls kept all their dance programs, pressed a flower from the bouquet worn on some special occasion, saved a menu of a very enjoyable dinner or banquet, a black mask with a lace frill reminiscent of some masquerade or carnival, a fancy garter worn by a bride at her wedding and kept for good luck.

Oh, that reminds me of the style, not so long ago, when we all wore "jazz garters" below our knee—I bet some still have a pair of those dazzling beauties tucked away in some forgotten corner of some bureau drawer. I thought they were an idiotic custom, and was glad they were not popular very long.

However, the day of all the feminine "chicken-fixins" mentioned by Tony Wons is long past, but threatens to descend on us again soon in the near future. For a while everything along the "fluffy-ruffles" style seemed to have been delegated to the rag-bag or "Gone with the Wind." Ruchings and hat-pins and veils went with the old-fashioned petticoat, but who knows what the future holds in store for us? Whatever fashion decrees we must of necessity follow or be thought hopelessly behind the times, unless we have attained our freedom by reaching the "three score years and ten," when we should be allowed to do as we like for the remaining few years left to us. (But I don't suppose we will be!)

Every day now brings us nearer spring—and if we are wise we will endeavor to get all our house-cleaning well out of the way so that when the day comes that we can step out into our garden to begin the season's work on the flower borders, we may do so with a clear conscience.

Now I am smiling at myself again for spring seems a long, long way off tonight as I sit cozily indoors writing, with the fires burning brightly, for it is below zero and has been pretty chilly for days. There was a beautiful sun-dog this afternoon, which means continued cold. We have heaps of snow, which fell over a week ago and hasn't thawed at all since. We have fastened our Christmas tree up in the middle of the garden opposite the kitchen window, snow piled high around it, and I have huge chunks of fat meat tied in the branches for the birds.

The starlings found it the day we set it up there—and they make short work of the "refreshments." "I saw three sparrows chasing one starling the other day—they resent them "poaching" on what they deem their "preserves."

And, as if to be in keeping with the zero weather, and frosty atmosphere this evening the Salvation Army outside on the corner, sang "From Greenland's Icy Mountains." It sounded very appropriate! Later in the evening I caught myself humming it again, then all of a sudden it came into my mind about the nervous minister at the missionary meeting announcing that hymn, but getting slightly mixed, and saying "From Iceland's greasy mountains."

Of course, those are the things we manage to remember when we would rather forget—and we fail to recall the important things we would like to remember. Such is life!

Well! Here's hoping we housewives find all kinds of lost treasures in some of our bureau drawers!

SOIL SPECIALIST WILL SPEAK HERE

Continuing their policy of holding educational meetings addressed by outstanding authorities, the executive of the North York local of the the Toronto Milk Producers' Association has completed arrangements for a meeting to be held in the Temperance hall, Newmarket, on Wednesday evening, Jan. 26, commencing at 8 p.m.

The speaker for the occasion will be N. J. Thomas, soil specialist of the department of chemistry, Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, and he will discuss pasture improvement and pasture management.

The executive, under the leadership of President James Hope of Pine Orchard, had tentatively set an earlier date, but realizing that many farmers who are not members of the Milk Producers' Association would be interested in this subject, it was decided to leave the meeting until Wednesday of next week, and to extend a cordial invitation to all interested in this problem of keeping up a steady pasturage throughout the season.

The question of fertility and addition of minerals to soils and rations will likely be brought up, as there was a great deal of interest aroused in this connection at last year's meeting, which was addressed by G. R. Green of Woodstock.

Mr. Thomas has had a wide experience on pasture work and is highly recommended.

THE OSTREKOFF JEWELS

By E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM

A GREAT NOVEL OF LOVE AND ADVENTURE

Prince and Princess Ostrekoff, the latter a great beauty of the last Czarist period, await the onsweeping horde of the 1917 Bolshevist upheaval. The sentence of death has been pronounced and they have taken refuge in the palace in Petrograd and are listening to the rumble of artillery and the cracking of rifles in the streets. Wilfred Haven, an American attache of the embassy, is with them. He has been entrusted with the family jewels for delivery to their daughter, Princess Elisaveta, in London. A window opposite the palace is thrown open; they see a woman struggling in the arms of a leering revolutionist; her shrieks ring out above the heads of the street mob. Haven leaves the palace for the embassy a short distance away——

INSTALMENT TWO

Shouldering Another Burden

Fifty yards down a side street, dominated by the gigantic encircling wall of the Ostrekoff Palace, followed by one dash across the broader thoroughfare, and Wilfred Haven would have reached the comparative sanctity of the embassy and his own quarters. He strode along at a rapid pace, his hands in his overcoat pockets, his hat pushed back on his head as though to disclose his Saxon nationality, his eyes everywhere on the lookout for danger. Ahead of him, the sky was red with the reflection of a hundred fires, the air he breathed was rank with the smell of burning wood and masonry.

In the not very far distance, unseen men and women were screaming and shouting—a constant wave of discordant sound like the baying of an innumerable pack of hell-hounds. He shivered as he pushed onward, desperately anxious to escape from the hideous clamor.

The rioting had been in progress for almost a week, but the horrors seemed to grow rather than lessen. Then, in the middle of the boulevard, within sight of his destination, he was brought to a sudden standstill. The blood seemed to rush to his head. Opposite to him was the tall, narrow house with the flaming windows, and from behind the lower one, where the lights had been extinguished, came floating out once more, half stifled moans of agony and appeal, the cry of that still tortured woman.

The broad boulevard, in the centre of which he stood and up and down which he glanced now with quick apprehension, was temporarily deserted. Everyone seemed to have travelled southward to where the skies grew redder every moment, whence came now long wafts of hot air and the increasing roar of voices.

Every instinct of Haven's nature rejected and discarded those cautionary whispers of his brain. He traversed the remainder of the boulevard in a dozen strides. He sprang across the paved yard, mounted the steep flight of steps, and pushed his way past the front door, which had been half torn from its hinges and lay at a perilous angle upon its side. Here, in the main hall of the house, he paused a moment, breathless. All around him were evidences of wild pillage.

From the upper rooms came the clamor of shouting, drunken voices, the smashing of glass, disorder and riot rampant, a nightmare of furious license. A paralizing indecision tortured Wilfred Haven in those few moments. Once more his brain had begun to work. He was pledged to a great and dangerous undertaking. What right had he to imperil his faint chance of success by plunging into a fresh adventure? Ostrekoff had spoken the truth. There were a thousand women being maltreated that night. A torrent of human madness and brutality was flowing which no human being could stem.

The perilous mission to which he was already committed was full enough of danger and romance for any man. Already from upstairs came the sound of the banging of doors. At any moment the mob might come sweeping down. No one man could stand up against it, and his life, for as much as it was worth, was pledged. Reluctantly he turned away. He had even taken a single step toward the street, when, from the room on his right, only a few yards distant, came that same pitiful, irresistible cry for help, weaker now and fainted with a pitiful despair. Hesitation after that was no longer possible. He flung open the tottering door and pushed his way inside.

The Rescue

It was a scene of wild confusion into which he stepped—a bourgeois-looking dining room it might have been, or the salle a manger of a pension. There were bottles, mostly broken, upon a heavy sideboard which took up one wall of the apartment. In its centre was a long table laden with more empty bottles, plates and debris of various kinds, and—most tragical sight of all—in the far corner, nearer to the window, a girl, bound with stout cords to a heavy easy chair.

Her dark, almost black hair had become disordered as though in a struggle and there was a long stain of blood on her face. Her cheeks were ghastly pale, her already red-rimmed eyes were flaming with terror. Her once fashionable gray dress was torn and dishevelled. There was blood on her finger tips where she had been plucking at the cords.

"Brutes!" he cried. "Don't struggle, I'll have you out of that in a moment."

He added a word of reassurance in Russian while he searched his pockets for a knife. To his amazement she answered him, chokingly, but in unmistakable English.

"A knife? There, by the sideboard—hurry."

He followed the slight movement of her head. A rudely fashioned peasant's knife lay among the bottles, already wet and suggestively stained. He picked it up and, falling on his knees, hacked at the cords which bound her. All the time the pandemonium upstairs ebbed and flowed as the doors were opened or closed. The girl was free now from her shoulders to her waist. She had fallen a little on one side and was evidently struggling against unconsciousness. He attacked the thicker cord that bound her knees. Suddenly they heard the dreaded sound—heavy stumbling footsteps on the stairs. Whoever she was, he thought afterward, it must have been a fine impulse which prompted her whisper.

"Better go," she faltered, "The house is full of them—they will kill you."

He laughed scornfully. Life and death during those last few moments seemed to have lost their full significance. One more twist of the knife and she was free. He stood up. She too staggered to her feet but at first attempt sank back into the chair. Nevertheless, she was standing once more by his side when he turned to face the owner of the footsteps. The latter came blundering into the room, true to type, a large bestial-looking man, his cheeks flushed with drink, his eyes hungry with lust. He stopped short by the table, shouting and yelling wild Russian oaths, a whole string of them, as he saw the girl free from her bondage and Haven by her side. The latter acted on an inspiration that served him well.

He wasted no breath in words, but, when he saw the newcomer's long hairy fingers groping toward his belt, he rushed in before he could reach his knife, struck up the hand with his right fist and got home with his left upon the chin. The man was of sturdy build, however, and although he was momentarily staggered, he held his ground and persisted in his efforts to reach his knife. Haven, ducking low, ran in once more, hit him under the jaw this time and sent his victim crashing into a pile of broken furniture.

"Come on," he shouted to the girl. "Here, I'll help you."

The Wolf Pack

He passed an arm round her waist and drew her into the passage.

"Pull yourself together if you can," he implored. "They're coming down the upper stairs now. If they see us, heaven knows how we shall get away. We've only a few steps to go if you can stick it out."

She drew a long breath and one could almost see the nerves of her body quivering with the effort she was making as she struggled toward recovery. With the great smear of blood down one cheek, her torn clothes and swollen wrists, she was a veritable figure of tragedy.

"I am all right," she gasped. "Let us—get out of this filthy house. The air in the street will revive me."

They made their way, stumbling, down the passage and over the fallen front door, his heart sinking all the time at their slow progress. Then the terror broke upon them.

Behind, the stairs creaked and groaned with the weight of the howling mob which had turned the corner and come suddenly into view. They had found drink, and they had found booty of a sort, but they wanted the girl. The place rang with their clamor. Someone had lit a torch and they realized that it was a stranger who was stealing off with her. They pushed one another so madly that the banisters gave way, and a dozen of them crashed on to the hard floor. One or two of them lay still, but the others picked themselves up and joined in the onward rush. Haven knowing enough Russian to apprehend the fury behind, pushed his companion impetuously toward the steps.

"Listen," he begged breathlessly, "turn to the left here — up the boulevard, you understand. Twenty yards only and then again to the left. Fifty yards down the street and there's an iron gate—back way to the American embassy. Hide there in the garden till I come."

"And if you do not come?" she faltered

He dodged a burning fragment of the banisters which fell at his feet, sending a shower of sparks into the air, and held up his arm to protect her from the stream of missiles beginning to come.

"If I don't come, it'll be because a dead man couldn't help, anyway," he rejoined swiftly. "You must bang at the doors then and perhaps they'll let you in. If you want to help me now—run."

She obeyed him, although her knees were trembling and her limbs quivering with fear. She tottered down the paved way toward the street, where the darkness hid her almost at once from sight. She became part of the gloom, a shadowy lost figure, staggering into obscurity.

The Mob Halts

Haven faced the angry crowd, now within a few yards of him.

"Get back, my friends," he shouted in Russian. "I am an American and I am not worth following. The girl is English. It pays to leave us alone."

They answered with a chorus of jeers and began to move stealthily toward him. A constant shower of missiles thrown by drunken hands he easily avoided, but a leaden weight, thrown by a man who seemed to be a blacksmith, passed within a few inches of his head and crashed into a dwarf lime tree.

From the rear, a youth came running out of the room on the ground floor, shouting that Navokan, the shoemaker, who was to have had first converse with the girl, lay dead. There was a rumble of angry voices. Haven called to them again, seeking for peace, but no one wanted a parley. They wanted blood. They were stealing around him, those dark figures, and he knew that, if once he suffered himself to be surrounded, their fingers would be tearing at his throat. With a groan he drew the automatic pistol, which he had never yet discharged except at practice, from his pocket.

He came of a Quaker family, hating bloodshed. He stopped farther back, all the time gaining ground. He was almost in the road now. A piece of burning wood grazed his leg. He kicked it away, ignoring the pain.

"Don't you hear me, little brothers?" he cried. "Why should we fight—you and I? There are plenty of other women in the city—women of your own race, too—whose arms are open to you."

No one took the slightest notice of his appeal. The missiles were coming faster—accompanied by a stream of oaths and terrible threats. They wanted the blood of this young man. They meant having it, and tearing his body to pieces afterward. One of them, who had almost the appearance of a monk, in his long toga-like cloak, a giant brandishing a torch in one hand and a great knotted stick in the other, came blundering forward.

He whirled the stick above his head ferociously, and they all cheered him on. Wilfred Haven set his teeth. This was the end, then. He shot his would-be aggressor through the chest, just as the blow was about to descend, never doubting but that the rest of them would be upon him like a pack of mad dogs as soon as they saw their leader fall. The effect of the shot, however, was in its way astounding. The man, who felt the hot stab in his chest, stopped short and swayed upon his feet. A look of wild, almost pathetic surprise chased even the wolf-like bestiality from his face. He staggered and fell face forward, rolled over once and lay quite still. Retreating slowly, Haven kept his gun outstretched, meaning to gain time for the girl and to sell his own life as dearly as possible. For the moment, however, a miracle seemed to have happened. He was completely ignored. The savage-looking mob seemed to have forgotten their lust for blood and pillage; they were gathered around the body of the dead man, weeping and lamenting like children. Every moment Haven's eyes opened wider in amazement. Then he realized his good fortune and fled.

Safety

Incredible though it appeared to him, he passed out of the gate and along the boulevard without a single pursuer. A few yards down the street he caught up with the girl leaning against the high railings and partly unconscious. She tottered toward him, and he half carried, half dragged her through the gate he had indicated, into the gardens. Inside, and behind the shadow of some shrubs, he paused for a moment to listen. The tumult in the centre of the city continued unabated, but nearer at hand everything seemed peaceful. He led her along a gravel path toward a formidable-looking door which he opened with a Yale key. As soon as they were both inside, he slammed and bolted it. For a time, at any rate, they were in safety.

"Well, what do you know about that?" he demanded of no one in particular as he leaned against the wall, recovering his breath.

She sank on a divan with a little sob of relief. With one hand she pressed a fragment of torn handkerchief to her eyes; the other sought weakly for his. Wilfred Haven, who was not in the least used to holding a girl's hand, patted it awkwardly.

"Come that's fine!" he exclaimed, drawing off his overcoat. "We're out of our troubles for the present, at any rate. I'll get you some tea or brandy in a few minutes, and we'll decide what we can do for you."

Her eyes sought his, eyes of a wonderful deep blue, almost violet, eyes that were pathetically eloquent with gratitude.

"You have been wonderful," she told him. "What should I have done without you!"

"That's all right," he declared hurriedly. "Somebody else would have chanced along, I expect. I say, you're in rather a mess," he went on, looking at her ruefully. "We haven't a woman in the house, and I'm afraid most of the rooms upstairs are dismantled."

"If I could wash——"

He threw open the door of a large, old fashioned lavatory and bathroom opposite.

"No one uses this place," he told her. "Lock yourself in and I'll come and fetch you in twenty minutes' time. We're in a terrible muddle here because we're clearing out tonight, but the Russian servants always keep some tea going."

An Undeniable Appeal

She smiled at him—a somewhat distorted gesture. Notwithstanding her ruined clothes and generally dishevelled appearance, there was no doubt about her beauty.

"I shall take anything that you give me, but do not be longer than twenty minutes, please," she begged, with a faint shiver.

"Before you go, will you promise me something?"

"Well?"

"You spoke of clearing out. You are going away. You will not leave me in this city?"

He looked at her, thunderstruck. The possible consequence of his act of chivalry occurred to him for the first time.

'But—but, my dear young lady," he pointed out, " don't you understand we're quitting? We're off across the frontier tonight—unless they change their minds and throw us into prison instead."

She smiled at him once more through the closing door and this time it was by no means a distorted gesture.

"Across the frontier," she confided, "is just where I want to go."

The Journey Begins

Without a doubt, the most thrilling moment of that hectic and amazing journey out of Russia arrived when Walter Pearson, a youth of 22 and the junior member of the Counsellor's staff, suddenly drew back from his place, half out of the window, and made a portentous announcement. He pointed to the line of lights in the distance toward which the train was lumbering.

"The frontier!"

John Hayes, the Counsellor and senior member of the little party, who was smoking a long cigar, was apparently the least interested. Rastall, the third secretary, the whole of whose personal belongings had been looted at the railway station before leaving, was still searching for fresh oaths and remained entirely indifferent. Wilfred Haven, who was conscious of the warm pressure of a chamois leather belt around his waist, and to whose left wrist was attached, by means of a chain, the embassy bag by his side, shivered with excitement as he realized that the actual commencement of his great adventure was close at hand. What the girl felt was not easily discerned, but there was a vague shadow of apprehension in her eyes. She drew nearer to her companion.

"This is a terrible journey," she murmured. "If only we were safe on the other side.!"

"I shouldn't worry," he answered reassuringly. "They aren't likely to turn you back. You've even got your passport, which is more than I expected."

"Passports are all very well for you," she said, "because you are foreigners and your passports have the diplomatic visas. The Russia even of these days dare not offend you."

The Counsellor withdrew his cigar from his lips. He had been in a state of silent but simmering indignation for the last two hours.

"Well, I don't know, young lady," he objected. "I should say they'd done their best to get our backs up. Three hours we sat in this cattle truck before they let us start. Nothing to eat or drink upon the train, or anywhere else that I can discover, except what we brought ourselves. No sleeping accommodation, and one of the foulest crowds of fellow passengers I've ever seen in my life. My back's up already, I can tell you that. If ever this country gets a Government again, she'll hear something from us. We may be running it rather fine, for we're the fag end of the show, but we've all got diplomatic passports and they don't call for this sort of treatment."

The girl sighed. She was wearing a neat but shabby black dress and a worn fur coat, discarded garments of one of the embassy typists. The only head covering they had been able to get for her, however, was a boy's black beret, under which she seemed paler than ever. Her eyes were fixed almost in terror on that encircling row of twinkling lights.

"So long as they let us pass," she murmured. "Any country in the world, but never again Russia!"

"I think you'll find they'll be glad enough to get rid of us," Haven assured her. "If they're going on as they've begun, they won't want foreigners around."

The long train rumbled over a bridge, which was apparently in course of repair, and almost immediately came to a standstill. They were in what appeared to be a temporary station—a long shed-like building witth a rude platform. A blaze of lights about a quarter of a mile farther down the line seemed to indicate the real whereabouts of the depot.

"What the mischief is this place?" John Hayes growled.

Haven let down the window to look out, but the rain and icy wind set them all shivering. He pulled it promptly up again.

"Can't see anything anyhow," he announced. "No good worrying. Let's wait and see what happens."

Fugitive Terror

On the other side of them, the outside corridor was thronged with a motley crowd of men and women of probably every nationality and class in the world, who passed up and down slowly and with infinite trouble, like dumb, suffering animals. Here and there was a person of a better type, but upon the countenance of every one of them was the same expression of mute and expectant terror. They pressed white faces against the windows of the compartment, looking in with envy at the comparative comfort in which Wilfred Haven and his companions were seated. One or two even tried the handle of the locked door. The whole place seemed to be at their mercy, for there was apparently no train attendant nor any guard. Yet on the whole, except for a couple of fights among themselves, which amounted to little more than scuffles, they behaved in orderly fashion.

An hour passed without any sign of movement. Suddenly there was a stir. Everyone in the corridor crowded backward. From the lower end of the car came the sound of loud voices and heavy footsteps. The girl shivered.

"There's nothing to be afraid of," Haven whispered. "These men, after all, have a certain amount of authority. The sooner we get it over the better."

The footsteps and voices reached the next compartment. Presently there was a disturbance. The outside carriage door, opening on the platform, was thrown open.

They all gathered around the windows, and a shiver went through them. A small, thin man, with a mass of blond hair and a look of despair upon his face, was being led away, handcuffed, by one of the station police. A woman, left behind, was shrieking from the train window. The girl leaned back in her place and closed her eyes.

"I wonder more people do not go mad these days," she murmured.

Their own time had arrived. A man in some sort of a military uniform, with a red sash around it stood over a station attendant whilst he unlocked their door.

MOUNT ALBERT

FLOWER GROWERS HEAR J. F. CLARK

The annual meeting of the Mount Albert horticultural society was held on Wednesday evening of last week in the basement of the United church. A hot supper preceded the meeting, which all thoroughly enjoyed.

John F. Clark, of the department of agriculture, was the speaker of the evening and gave a very fine illustrated address on bulbs, and Mrs. Clark, who came with him, rendered several beautiful solos, accompanied by Mrs. Roy Harmon.

Miss Margaret Ross gave an amusing reading and Rev. R. V. Wilson played several violin solos, with Miss Olive Tinsdale at the piano. All present declared it a very interesting program and Mr. Clark was invited back for next year.

The following officers were elected for 1938: president, E. Watts, 1st vice-president., Dr. W. L. Carruthers; 2nd vice-pres., G. Barnes; auditors, Kenneth Ross and W. R. Steeper; new directors, J. Crowle, Milton Gibney, Miss B. Harmon, Miss E. Hayes, Rev. R. V. Wilson.

The ribbon donated by the horticultural society was given to the president, E. Watts, for his good work throughout the year.

During the year the society have taken care of the park on the hill, also the different flower beds in the town. A new one was started on Mill St., which Dr. Johnson very kindly had worked up and put in a number of plants and the society have been adding to it and it has certainly improved the side of the street, which was an eyesore. The work of the society has made a great improvement in the village and anyone that wants to help is asked to join it.

Messrs. Geo. Stokes and Garnet Parks spent the weekend in Toronto.

Miss Elsie Steeper spent several days in Toronto last week.

The annual church meeting of the United church will be held in the church on Wed., Jan. 26.

Miss Nora Wilson has gone to Toronto.

Carman Rolling has purchased a snow-plow to keep the roads open through the township.

Mr. Bill Stokes of Toronto was at the home of his father, Mr. W. D. Stokes, on Sunday.

Mr. Harmon Dike, who has been in poor health for some time, is not improving and is in bed now.

MAN SEES WIFE DROWN IN CAR

One of Lake Simcoe's worst tragedies occurred late last Friday afternoon, when three men and one woman were drowned in 60 feet of water, about a mile and a half from shore near Island Grove, when the car in which they were crossing the ice plunged through thin ice and sank immediately.

They were returning from a day's fishing out on the lake. The driver of the car, James A. Nelson, was able to wrench open the left front door of the car and drag himself to the ice. Three other members of the party, who were riding behind the car on a sleigh, were saved. Those drowned were: Emmanuel Nelson, 33, William Jones, 33, Mrs. John Wilkinson, 43, and Jack Bird, 49, all of Belhaven.

John Wilkinson, husband of one of the victims, 14-year-old Jack Wilkinson, his son, and Robert Charles, 34, an Indian, were on the sleigh and Charles pulled the other two to safety. The driver of the car and those on the sleigh made desperate efforts to save the others, but things happened so quickly that they were able to do nothing.

SUTTON WEST

TAKE THIRD WIN IN CLOSE BATTLE

Sutton Junior O. H. A. team came from behind in the final period of their game here on Friday night to take a well earned 5-4 decision from Lindsay's snappy crew to make their third straight win of the series. The locals were down two goals at the offset of the third stanza, but a strong offensive type of play gave them four well-deserved counters. Jack Burnham put Sutton one up on an individual effort on which the goalie had little chance. Penalties were handed out to both teams by an inexperienced referee and it was while Sutton was playing short-handed that Lindsay tied the score.

During the second period, play was quite even, both teams missing many chances and back-checking each other to a stand-still. Jack Burnham was awarded a penalty shot during a fracas in front of the net, but failed to beat the Lindsay net-minder.

As the final session began, Lindsay scored twice in one minute, to make the score read Lindsay 3, Sutton 1. Cooke and Pearson combined to make the count read 3-2, and were followed shortly after when Pearson skated in with Burnham to even the score.

Carson Fairbarn, one of the standouts of the game, weaved through the entire team to put his outfit one goal up. From the face-off Lindsay caught the locals napping and went in on Macdonald to even the score for the second time. With the time almost up, George Cooke, clever forward, banged in the winning goal from a scramble in front of the net. This is the third straight win for the Sutton entry.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Freeman of Niagara Falls, N.Y., are visiting the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Freeman.

Miss Ruby Culverwell spent last weekend in Ottawa.

Miss Pearl Ward spent last week with her sister in Toronto.

Miss Helen Tranter spent the weekend with friends in Sutton.

Congratulations are extended to Mr. and Mrs. A. Clark on the birth of a daughter.

Pine Orchard

Mr. and Mrs. Norman Crone and boys, of Sharon, had Sunday night tea with Mr. and Mrs. L. Harper.

Miss Viola Johnson was a guest for tea on Friday night at Mrs. R. Willis' home.

Mrs. L. Harper took tea on Wednesday of last week with Mrs. G. McClure.

Little Murray McClure and Roy McNichol attended a birthday supper at the home of Mr. McLean, in honor of their son, Douglas, last Friday.

The program committee of the Willing Workers met at the home of Mrs. Colville last Wednesday afternoon. They have planned the program for the year and expect to have them ready to distribute at the next meeting on Feb. 2, at the home of Mrs. D. McIntyre, Newmarket.

The community was saddened last Saturday morning to learn of the passing of Miss Lettie Toole of Newmarket, and who, in former years, lived on the 4th line of Whitchurch. Several from Pleasantville attended the service on Monday, at her late residence. Interment was in Pine Orchard cemetery.

Since the beginning of the new year there has been a good attendance at the Union Sunday-school. Also quite a number were out to the church service last Sunday. Dr. McIntyre delivered a very impressive message.

The Bogarttown community club will meet at the schoolhouse on Friday, Jan. 21.

OFFICERS ELECTED AT CEMETERY MEETING

There were 73 interments in Newmarket cemetery last year, making a total of 4,401 interments there, according to the 69th annual report presented by W. L. Bosworth, president, and W. O. Carruthers, secretary-treasurer, at the annual meeting on Monday evening.

The report told of improvements to the grounds and to the caretaker's house.

The financial report, audited by George Vale, showed securities and cash on hand of $54,344. Endowments during 1937 totalled $1,537.50.

Officers were re-elected as follows: president, W. L. Bosworth; sec.-treas., W. O. Carruthers; directors, F. O. R. Simpson, Chas. Churchill, G. A. Binns, Ed. Brammer, J. H. Elvidge, Geo. Luesby, R. Deavitt and W. J. Geer.

EVERSLEY

YOUNG PEOPLE GO ON TRIP OF SONG

This is the season for annual meetings. King Cemetery company hold theirs on Saturday of this week in the masonic hall.

King United church held its annual meeting last Wednesday night, with the annual congregational supper. This is always an interesting meeting and much business is done.

Last Wednesday's snowstorm interfered with the Temperanceville Women's Institute meeting, which was to have been held at Mrs. Maurice Beynon's. The bus from Oak Ridges, with a load of women, the president and other officers, could not get down the Bathurst St. road. It might have been possible to get down, but the getting back was becoming more difficult all the time.

Eversley Young People's, which had been discontinued during Christmas season and the week of prayer, opened again on Friday night with a social evening at the home of D. M. Ross. The attendance was good. Mrs. Egan, president, and Mrs. Rawlings, were in charge of the program. There was singing from the new hymn sheets and a new year's prayer by Mrs. Jones.

The story of the Prodigal Son, read by Edith Bovair and a paper on this story emphasizing the great love of the Father, was given by Mrs. Egan, and Betty Ball read a poem in keeping.

The program part, conducted by Mrs. Rawlings, was largely musical. Miss Verna Bovair made her debut as a pianist and Alfred Barker, a soloist from the United church, sang "Dear Little Mother of Mine." Mrs. Rawlings conducted a musical contest, representing a journey by music beginning at Montreal, by playing a couple of lines of "O, Canada," then crossing the Atlantic she played from a well-known song of England, Wales, Scotland, Ireland, then to France, Spain, Italy, Germany, "A Song of India," "Aloha Oe" from Hawaii, and back home by "Home Sweet Home." Mrs. Rolling won an ever-sharp pencil as winner in the contest.

A group of slides illustrating a trip from New York to Bermuda and down through the West Indies, ending with British Guiana, was shown, Frank Egan managing the lantern and Rev. Mr. Burch giving the lecture. These were very beautiful and educational. A sumptuous lunch closed this evening of good fellowship.

WHITCHURCH HOLDS INAUGURAL MEETING

Whitchurch council at the first meeting of the year decided to hold over the appointments of assessors for a special session to be held in a few days for consideration of the assessment rolls and other business.

Appointments completed were that of Harry Sproxton as weed inspector and the two constables Williamson and Windsor as truant officers. The constables also investigate relief and it was felt they would be in a good position to attend those cases where children are not going to school under the claim of not having clothing.

It was Reeve Toole's suggestion that the police hold the dual office, and council said it was a good idea.

The hall board was renamed with no change in its personnel. The members are Reeve Toole, Deputy-Reeve Cook, Mrs. Dewsbury, Mrs. VanNostrand, Mrs. Hennessey, J. A. Clarke, W. D. Richardson, John Crawford.

It is 17 years this summer since the community hall was built at Vandorf. Councillor Herman Kidd recalled that it was his first year on the council, and he moved the resolution that the undertaking be entered into. Councillor George Leary was also on the council that year, also the late William Crawford.

Tax Collector Ross Ratcliff reported that $44,888 had been paid on the 1937 tax roll, leaving outstanding about $16,514. He had imposed penalties so far totalling $32.

Mrs. Wright appeared in person to lodge a complaint against the delay in paying her for land purchased last summer on the 4th concession. Unless settlement is made by Jan. 15 she promised legal action. Reeve Toole explained that the township had paid the money, but the delay was on the part of the solicitor. He promised to speed up the matter and advised Mrs. Wright against spending any money, as he felt she would be paid very quickly.

"All right, this is the last time I will ask for my money," said the irate woman.

Clerk John Crawford took the oaths of office as follows at the opening of the session: Reeve, C. E. Toole, Deputy-Reeve, Jess Cook, Councillors Herman Kidd, George Leary and Herbert Wells.

Road accounts were very light. About $30 was ordered paid for snow shovelling, maintenance of roads $12, culvert $19.72, and salary of superintendent $38.

The general accounts: H.E.P.C., $4.50; Era, $1.20; Express, $7; election board, $66.41; Dr. Urquhart, $12.50; Tribune, $105.50; postage, $9; F. Ball, fence, $66.77; R. Hurd & Son, $7.30; hospitalization, $138.61; R. E. Ratcliff, on account, $150.

Snowball

The Snowball branch of the Women's Institute will hold the January meeting at the home of Mrs. Albert Badger on Jan. 26. Motto: Whatever you do, do it kindly; roll call, community activities for this winter.

A very interesting talk will be given by Mrs. Ernest Copson on bills and business receipts. Community singing and current events paper by Mrs. John Morning, will also be on the program. Hostesses, Mesdames Ash, Badger, Case, C. Copson, Misses Bertha Ferguson and Ella Copson.

The W.M.S. and W.A. of the United church held their new year meeting at the home of Mrs. William Farren on Wednesday of last week with a real good turnout for such a severe winter day.

Mr. Hiram White has been under the doctor's care for some weeks and is still in a very serious condition.

Mrs. Earl Lloyd underwent an operation for appendicitis in the Toronto General Hospital on Thursday evening last. Latest reports are that she is doing well.

The Y.P.S. will hold their meeting on Thursday evening of this week at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Davison.

Mr. and Mrs. Emerson Cooper and Mr. Albert Somerville of Schomberg called on Mr. and Mrs. Harry Mills on Sunday afternoon. Mrs. Mills, who is still confined to bed, is making a slow but satisfactory recovery since her very serious illness.

Mrs. Robert Harrison spent a few days last week in Toronto.

A number of young people from Snowball attended a charivari dance at Vandorf on Friday evening for Mr. and Mrs. Ireland, newlyweds.

You will be pleasantly surprised at the low cost of Era printing.

HOLLAND LANDING

INSTALL UNITED CHURCH OFFICERS

Miss Irene Jeffreys of Lefroy spent the weekend with her aunt, Mrs. B. Pearce.

The Y.P.U. are anticipating a sleighing party on Thursday evening, with refreshments at the home of Mrs. Pearce.

The annual congregational supper was held in the United church on Wednesday of last week. Following a delightful supper prepared by the W.A., reports were given by the treasurers of the various organizations. No department carries a deficit and in most cases there is a very substantial balance. Installation of officers included the following: stewards, Allan Fawcett, Percy Thompson, John Scott and Irwin Tate; trustees, Wesley McCallum and J. Dutton.

Those who were not out to Y.P.U. last week missed a very interesting meeting led by Miss Olive Niles, missionary convener of the Christian Endeavour of Newmarket. Miss Annie Watts took the topic and Mrs. Morrison rendered a beautiful piano solo. Miss Niles recited a lovely poem, bringing the meeting to a close. A period of recreation was enjoyed by all and refreshments were served.

The police inspector was about to raid a gambling den. At midnight, taking his place at the head of the squad of officers, he looked them over closely and then asked his assistant:

"Is everything all set for this raid?"

"Yes, sir," said the assistant. "Our guns are in perfect order, there are the flashlight cameramen, the sound cars are waiting outside and I notified the proprietor of the place this afternoon. All set, sir."

This literary gem, a "short essay on frogs," by a young immigrant from Norway, is quoted from a "Bulletin" of the Chicago board of education:

"What a wonderful bird the frog are. When he hop he fly almost. He ain't got no sense, hardly. He ain't got no tail, hardly, either, when he sit on what he ain't got, almost."

How much of your salary do you take home to your wife each pay day?"

"None of it."

"How's that?"

"She meets me at the gate and takes it home herself."

PASTOR IMPROVES

Rev. R. R. McMath, recently called pastor of Trinity United church, is making favorable progress from his recent operation, according to a letter received from him by Dr. S. J. Boyd.

DON'T TAKE CHANCES

When tuberculosis strikes, there is no uncertainty as to the result if it is allowed to run its course, yet this disease is preventable—it is curable if taken in time.

It is unfortunate that so many of those who are afflicted fail to appreciate the necessity of immediate hospital treatment or, obligated by family ties, endeavour to carry on, thus lessening their chance of recovery and endangering all with whom they come in contact.

A recent article in the Crusader says—"Every case comes from another and every case may lead to another, too. The close association between parents and young children, therefore, often means the planting of fatal disease by tuberculous parents among their helpless youngsters, especially if their own condition is unrecognized and uncared for."

Fighting tuberculosis is a whole time job, demanding the abandonment of all other plans of life. It requires the application of much courage and patient determination by those afflicted, plus skilled medical and surgical treatment with expert nursing care.

Warnings of the approach of tuberculosis are just as definite as traffic signals on the road. Heed them and you will be safe. Neglect them—the penalty must be paid.

A persistent cough, over fatigue on slight exertion, night sweats, a generally run down condition, all point to this disease and indicate the immediate advice of a physician. Don't wait to consult him until it is too late and don't lose heart if your fears are confirmed, for tuberculosis can be cured if taken in time.

The Muskoka and the Toronto Hospitals for Consumptives and the Queen Mary Hospital for Consumptive Children are equipped to serve those who are in need. The good they may do and the number they may serve is limited only by their means.

As the rates chargeable for maintenance of patients are fixed by statute at less than cost, these hospitals must spend each day more than they receive. The result for the year is a shortage of $123,000, a large part of which amounts must now be raised by voluntary contributions.

Of all the charities appealing for help there are none where more good can be done with equal economy than the Muskoka, the Toronto and the Queen Mary Hospitals for Consumptives, which care solely for the tuberculous poor. Please send your contribution to National Sanitarium Association, 223 College Street, Toronto.
